DIET ECCENTRICITIES

AMAZING TASTES IN EATABLES
RECOUNTED BY A DOCTOR.

Dr. W. Fenwick at Meeting of London Society Tells of Devices to Excite an Appetite and of the Disease Known as Unsatiabie Hunger—Sword Swallowers Get Attached to Their Remarkable Luncheons.

Several extraordinary instances of people who had acquired the habit of eating hair, glass, dirt, clothing, with evident enjoyment, were mentioned by Dr. W. Fenwick, who gave an amazing address at the Institute of Hygiene in London on "Eccentricities in Dietary." Various odd devices, he said, were resorted to in former days to stimulate a flagging appetite, such as the drinking of spiced wines, the droppings of coins or cold metal down the back, or sometimes a little exercise or gentle alteration was indulged in between the courses to "settle the food in the stomach." It became the habit at a later period to scratch or fondle the lobe of the right ear to stimulate the flow of gastric juice, as the nerve which supplies this part of the skin has a direct connection with the great nerve of the stomach.

Dr. Fenwick's most amazing passage concerned those people who suffered from the disease of "insatiable hunger." The earliest notice of it, he said, was to be found in the Book of Genesis, where Pharaoh consulted Joseph about his dream of the fat and the lean kine, in which the lean kine devoured the fat ones without appearing an atom the better for it. That exactly described the case of the "insatiable hunger" victims. They would eat almost anything, yet they were always hungry, lean and ill-favored.

The lecturer gave instances. A girl of eight, who ordinarily at table ate as much as the seven other members of the household put together, one day escaped from her keeper in the kitchen, where she ate a raw codfish, two pounds of kitchen candles and several pounds of butter. A boy victim, for purposes of medical observations, was allowed twenty-four hours of perfect freedom. He devoured 100 pounds of raw meat in that time, besides etceteras. A third patient, a girl, was placed in a walled garden of shrubs, so tired had her parents become of her appetite, but love laughs at locksmiths, and before she was discovered, she had eaten every leaf, all the small twigs, and had started knowing a bough. A fourth case, a boy, on being shut up, ate all his clothes.

With a parting allusion to a lady who escaped into a dairy and ate 29 unboiled eggs, 6 pounds of butter and 5 pounds of bread, and washing it down with three pints of milk and two bottles of wine before sleep overcame her, Dr. Fenwick passed on to "idiosyncrasy of diet."

"Many people," he said, "possess an extraordinary relish for common salt. This often has the curious effect of increasing a person's weight. One young lady who devoured im-

On the ground that when they were married thirty years ago he was a protestant, and his wife a Roman Catholic, George Dowden, near Montreal, has applied to superior court for annulment of the marriage, claiming it was not legal. A Protestant minister tied the knot. The parties are sixty years of age. In view of the present controversy, this case is of great interest.

A despatch from Belleville says: Because so many head of milk cows have been sold, due to a scarcity of farm help to attend to the milking, the output of cheese from this district will show a falling off this season. In some sections farmers are turning their attention to the growing of tobacco. The experiment will be watched with interest, as it is claimed more money can be made growing tobacco with less work than in the dairy business.

Unhatched eggs, 6 pounds of butter and 5 pounds of bread, and washing it down with three pints of milk and two bottles of wine before sleep overcame her. Dr. Fenwick passed on to "idiosyncrasy of diet."

"Many people," he said, "possess an extraordinary relish for common salt. This often has the curious effect of increasing a person's weight. One young lady who devoured immense quantities of salt would increase as much as ten pounds in weight in twenty-four hours, and was frequently unable to wear a dress which was quite loose for her on the previous day. If you can persuade these people not to take salt so much they get well; if not, they die of dropsy. Many girls will devour slate pencils, chalk, and vinegar because nearly all these have at some time or other beautifying properties."

Then there were the paper eaters—usually children. They would scrape paper off the walls to satisfy their cravings, but their favorite food was newspaper. The effect was the formation of sodden balls of paper on the stomach, which resulted sometimes in appendicitis, consumption of the bowels, and other deadly complaints. Girl hair-eaters were next referred to. Young girls got into the habit of chewing wisps of their own hair, or the ends of their "pig-tails" while reading, and the habit sometimes persisted. In the stomach of one woman was found a ball of hair four pounds in weight. Dressmakers and mattress and mat makers were liable to eat cotton, string, or whatever else they might be working with. A boy employed at making cocoa-nut matting was found to have a large amount of fibre in his stomach. Among varnishers and polishers there were those who drank varnish and polish in large quantities, usually affecting the spirituous kind, with the result that enormous hard stones were formed in their stomachs.

"A popular way of enjoying strawberries," continued the lecturer, "is to go out in the garden and eat them immediately after a shower. But the custom carries with it the liability of eating the eggs of the 'daddy-long-legs,' which develop into the larvae known as the 'leather jacket'—a long, jointed, creature, with strong jaws, that will bite the end of the stick with which you prod it out of the ground. A person with a 'leather jacket' inside him will never enjoy himself."

The varieties in diet are innumerable, and local superstitions, religious or otherwise, are responsible for the unpleasant habit of eating mud, clay, dirt, soot, live fish, etc., after a time, become regarded as delicacies while occasionally the fashion spreads through an entire community as witnessed by the dirt-eating epidemics described by Hunter. Substances, too, which are often taken, in the first instance, for amusement, by frequent repetition, lead to insatiable desire. Thus, sword-swallowers, knife-eaters, glassblowers, and the like not only continue their peculiar practice for years, but actually get to relish them. There is an authentic case of an able-bodied seaman who was forced to drink out of a pewter pot because if he used a tumbler he never could resist the temptation of chewing up the glass and swallowing it afterwards.

Wm. Parker, superintendent of the whitefish hatchery at Sandwich, Ont., has been the last few days depositing whitefish fry in the bay. In all this trip he will place 1,500,000. Last fall it will be remembered he took away from the section along the Bay of Quinte 51,000,000 whitefish eggs to supply his hatchery at Sandwich. These when duly converted into fry are deposited in the Great lakes and their contributory waters.

some sections farmers are turning their attention to the growing of tobacco. The experiment will be watched with interest, as it is claimed more money can be made growing tobacco with less work than in the dairy business.

The death occurred on the 10th inst., at Emerson, Man., of A. W. Henderson, formerly of Millhaven, Ont., aged eighty-seven years. The late Mr. Henderson was born at Beauport, Que., on April 5th, 1821, and came to Millhaven, Ont., when quite a young man, where he married Miss Adele, eldest daughter of the late Jeremiah Amey, and where he spent the greater part of his life, moving from there to Prince Edward county for a couple of years, and in 1831 moving with his family to Emerson, Man., where he lived ever since.

Mr. G. W. Latta, of Corbyville, has secured a patent for a machine which will rake hay and put it in cocks at the one operation. The machine can be driven over hay just as it is left in the swath by the mower. The hay is elevated to an oval-shaped basket that continually rotates while the hay is filling and forming the haycock, the weight being about 150lbs. of hay. The hay is delivered on the ground in such a shape that it will shed both rain and dew. It is said that the machine will do as much work as five men in cocking hay.

Claiming that he has a perfect right to have his children educated in a public school, Roland Roberts, a retired Hamilton blacksmith, kidnapped his two children, Murray, aged seven, and Margaret, aged five, and bore them away in an automobile from Toronto to Hamilton. About two months ago husband and wife had a serious disagreement on the question of the children's education, the husband being a Protestant and the wife a Catholic. The marriage was performed by a Roman Catholic priest. As a result Mrs. Roberts is said to have left her husband and taken her children to her mother's home, 571 Logan avenue, Toronto, sending them to St. Anne's Roman Catholic School. This was quite contrary to the husband's wishes, and he made careful arrangements to get possession of the children. To this end he chartered an automobile and caught his offspring as they were on their way to school taking them to his home in Hamilton.

THE LEGION OF THE LOST

UNDERGO HARDSHIPS WHICH AMOUNT TO TORTURE.

What the "Stranger" Soldier Endures in the Foreign Legion of France.

I suppose those of us who ever think about the Foreign Legion of France at all, picture the men who compose it as a set of devil-may-care fellows who, having tired of a world of petty conventions and duties, have decided to live a life which consists of fighting, and, generally, in the reckless existence for which their souls long.

That they have to undergo hardships which amount to nothing more or less than positive torture will be news to most of us; but it seems that it is the plain, unvarnished truth. Erwen Rosen was a German-American who had lived an adventurous life, and, in the course of it, had done things which caused those who loved him best to turn from him, and so he joined the Foreign Legion. The story of his experiences while serving in that badly treated but glorious corps he tells in his book.

ONE CENT A DAY

The joining itself was an easy matter. France does not ask for a character with a Legionaire. She only asks that they be sound of wind and limb, and that they shall be willing to serve her for five years at the noble wage of one cent a day.

But, once he is in, he is in, and no mistake. There is no release, either by purchase or in any other way. The only method by which the Legionaire can bid adieu to life in the Legion is to desert, as Erwin Rosen did, and this is made as difficult as it is possible to imagine, while the punishment for attempting to do so is frightful. An incident concerning a couple of young Englishmen who, in a fit of desperation, had enlisted, and afterwards had repented, is related:

Petitions to the French Secretary for War were unavailing, and finally the two were sent a large sum of money, and tried their luck at deserting. They were no further than Saida Station, when they were arrested and marched back to prison.

Another attempt was made as soon as they were free, but it had the same result. But they were determined to get away from the life, and their relations arranged with a Levantine with a motor-car to make a third attempt.

The automobile had, however, attracted attention in Saida, and the military authorities came at once on the idea that these dauntless deserters had hit on the usual method of flight by motor-car. Telegrams flew from station to station, and the Arab police barricaded a narrow part of the road through a rocky part of the country absolutely impassable for vehicles. A short time afterwards the motor came up. The runaways took no notice of the warnings of the gendarmes who rode to meet them, and crashed at full speed into the pile of stones. The motor was overturned, the two deserters were killed immediately. The Levantine was seriously injured, and brought into the hospital at Sidi bel Abbas, where he died a few days later.

in the marching rows. The legs and back were strained to the utmost, and a word spoken seemed a waste of energy. One seemed to be a machine, marching on mechanically behind the man in front when once put in motion; each man was sufficiently occupied with himself. If anyone in utter weariness took a step to the right or a step to the left out of the marching line he got an oath hurled at him; you were so tired that even the slightest touch of your comrade swaying out of the line was an extra burden to the tormented body.

When the morning mists and the bitter cold of the dawn were followed by the hot, burning sun we had accomplished a march of forty kilometres, and the time came when our legs refused to do any more. When the signal sounded for rest we fell down helpless, and when we started marching again it looked as if a crowd of invalids and old men were slowly wandering down the road. During the halt the flow of blood was hemmed in the limbs. Standing on one's feet again one felt a hot, stinging pain in the soles. Every step was torture. For five minutes longer one crawled along as best one could till one became once more an unfeeling automaton.

And to fall fainting in the ranks avails nothing. Conscious or unconscious, well or dying, the Legionaire must march on.

A Legionaire who faints on the march is tied to the baggage cart. A pole is pushed through the sides of the cart at about the height of a man's arms, and the Legionaire roped to it by the shoulders. The pole keeps him in a standing position; the cart rolls on.

And our author recognizes that, cruel as this may seem, it is necessary, for if a soldier were left behind, the Arab women would come, and we have seen what this means. Yes; the soldier of the Foreign Legion is the finest marcher in the world—he has to be.

THE MADNESS OF DESPAIR.

A curious complaint is common in the Legion. It is called "cafard"; or perhaps it may best be expressed in English as the madness of despair. No Legionaire escapes it, but some get it worse than others. An instance is given of an old soldier of the Legion who used to disappear whenever he had the money to buy himself wine. One evening when he returned he was, as usual, greeted by the sergeant with a volley of curses:

The old Legionaire stared at the sergeant. Suddenly, without saying a word, he hit him on the face with his fist.

"Aux armes!" the reeling sergeant yelled.

Bertillon had pulled out his bayonet, and was slashing and hitting at everyone, roaring like a wild beast. A terrible tussle ensued. We were twelve to one, but it took us more than a quarter of an hour to get the upper hand of the "cafard" madman, and everyone had been more or less wounded by his bayonet. At length we threw blankets over his head, and, strapping him up like a parcel, we threw him into prison.

On opening the cell the next morning he was found dead. At the post-mortem examination the Army surgeon stated that the bursting of an artery in the brain had been the cause of death.

The author, in the course of his grim, though wonderfully interesting narrative, does not hesitate to remind France that she drives too hard a bargain with the poor fel-

IN THE DEPTHS OF THE SEA

AMAZING WONDERS BENEATH THE SEA.

At 2,500 Fathoms the Pressure is Two and a Half Tons to Square Inch.

There is a very brilliant article by Professor J. Arthur Thomson in the London Quarterly Review. He calls it "The Dryad in the Tree." This, he explains, is "the principle of life, the something that made an animal different from an engine, the innermost secret of activity."

But the Dryad does not appear only in the tree. We find him in the sea, and some of Professor Thomson's most interesting pages deal with the wonders beneath the sea.

ABUNDANCE OF LIFE.

"Many of us on an ocean voyage may have watched the sun set in the water, lingering for a minute or two like a ball of fire balanced on the tight spring of the horizon. We may have waited till it was dark except for the stars and the steam-er lights, and then enjoyed the 'phosphorescence.' There was a cascade of sparks at the prow, a stream of sparks all along the water level, a welter of sparks in the wake, and even where the waves break there is fire. So it goes on for miles and hours—the luminescence of the rapid vital combustion of pin-head like creatures, so numerous that a bucketful contains more of them than there are people in London. This is just one of a thousand ways of feeling the abundance of life. The reports on deep sea exploration form a library by themselves. The area of abyssal depths occupies more than half of the earth's surface. The average depth is two and a half miles, and there are many places which would engulf inverted Himalayas; the "Challenger Depth" in the North Pacific reaches 5,269 fathoms, approaching six miles, and if Mount Everest were thrown in there would be 2,600 feet of water above it.

PRESSURE OF DEEP WATER.

At the common depth of 2,500 fathoms the pressure is two and a half tons to the square inch, some twenty times greater than the pressure on the boiler of a good locomotive. A down-sinking of cold polar water, especially a northward movement from the far south keeps the abyssal temperature very low—about the freezing point of fresh water and often lower, and brings down abundant oxygen. The heat rays do not penetrate below 150 fathoms or so. This world of eternal winter is also very dark, for there is very little light below 250 fathoms, and in the true deep sea there is nothing to relieve the darkness save the fitful gleams of phosphorescent light.

DARKNESS OF THE DEEP.

"Among the results of Sir John Murray's 1910 deep-sea exploration in the North Atlantic, we notice that with a very delicate Helland-Hansen photometric apparatus, the influence of light was detected clearly at 300 fathoms, faintly at 500 fathoms, and not at all at 900 fathoms. While this extends what parison with laying cables (and that has meant much); intellectually, for it has been a rare chance ground for the scientific investigator; emotionally, for there is perhaps no more striking modern gift to the imagination than the picture we have roughly sketched of the eerie, cold, dark, silent, plantless, monotonous, but thickly peopled world of the Deep Sea.

THE MEANING OF THE SEA.

"Yet, this cannot be its full meaning. So perhaps we get nearer the heart of the problem when we recognize that the deep sea is an integral part of the whole. It is the overflow basis of the great fountain of life, the arch of which is sunlight. It is necessary to the economy of the ocean. It is the universe clearing house. And perhaps we may go a little deeper still, for when we recognize that the insurgent life has conquered this desert, that this byway is full of beauty, and especially that there is here the same order and rationality and pervasive purposiveness that we find elsewhere, then we know that the life of the deep sea is part of a great idea, a great thought—part of that whole which is greater than the sum of its parts. It is to this that the Dryad leads us."

CHINESE MODEL CITY.

A Home for Returning Emigrants Built to Order.

A little over a year ago a number of Chinese capitalists inaugurated the construction of a modern Chinese city to order on the shore of Yehli Bay, ten miles from Macao inner harbor and not far from one of the Lappa customs stations in the province of Kwangtung. In some respects the scheme is a peculiarly significant one. The new city is to be called Heungchow. Of the enterprise the Chinese Imperial Maritime Customs Commissioner at Lappa, in his annual report, says:—

It is openly stated that a new Chinese city with all foreign comforts, as it is intended to make Heungchow, will be a great attraction to many wealthy Chinese immigrants, who are averse to returning to their own country and making their homes in an ordinary Chinese city or village for the reason that, owing to long residence in foreign countries, they have acquired foreign habits, likings and tastes. The promoters of the scheme is a most ambitious one. Of prime necessity there will be the construction of an immensely strong breakwater, over a mile long, and extensive dredging, as there is no natural harbor. Jetties are to be solidly constructed of large blocks of stone, which exists in large quantities in the neighboring hills, sunk in layers between rows of wooden piles. The scheme allows for a well laid out city, with broad streets and foreign buildings for shops and residences, which is to be governed by a municipal council; it also provides for schools, charitable institutions, police and fire stations, theatre, public gardens, electric lights and trams, water works, afforestation, chamber of commerce, free libraries, and in fact everything that may tend to public good. Opium smoking and gambling of all sorts are to be strictly prohibited.

The construction of the city was commenced in April, 1909, and quite a large number of buildings have been erected, including police to meet them, and crashed at full speed into the pile of stones. The motor was overturned, the two deserters being killed immediately. The Levantine was seriously injured, and brought into the hospital at Sidi bel Abbes, where he died a few days later.

THE TATOOED SKULL.

Truly, France does not let her Legionnaires leave her easi'. There are plenty of other horrors in the Legion, as the following will show:

Hardly had I recovered from my surprise, than a passing Legionnaire made me stare in a hurry. The man had a grinning image of a skull tattooed on his forehead. He smiled at my frightened face, and was evidently very pleased at the impression he had made. Pleased with the notice he had attracted, the Legionnaire with the skull on his forehead walked up to us and spoke to me.

"Eh, recruit, do you want to see something that only very old Legionnaires have got?"

He showed me a tobacco-pouch, apparently made of fine, soft leather.

"This is made of the breast of an Arab woman," said the man of the skull. "It is a very good tobacco-pouch. Made it myself. There are only seven in the whole regiment now. Chose n'est ce pas. That is something worth seeing?"

With a grin of vanity he walked away.

In another part of this terrible book we are permitted dimly to understand the things which make it possible for men to appreciate tobacco-pouches made from the breasts of women.

Upon the Arab woman the old Legionnaire looks as upon a devil. He thinks of the heinous tortures that wounded men have suffered at the hands of Arab women, he remembers the mutilated bodies of Legionnaires who have died an awful death after being tortured for many hours.

In the fourth year of his service Rassendin had been ordered to one of the little Sahara stations where he had seen much of the cruelty of Arab women. Once a scouting party of his detachment had found a skeleton in the sands of the desert. Strips of the uniform showed that the skeleton had once been a soldier of the Legion. The skeleton's head was lying between the legs.

Another time the corporal of Rassendin's squad was missed at the morning call. In the evening he had taken a walk just in the neighborhood of the station, and had not returned. After a short search they found him. "He was dead; but even in death I could see the frightful agony in his wide-open eyes," Rassendin declared. Both legs were broken and bent backwards. The lower part of his body was slashed to pieces, but none of his wounds was deadly. They must have tormented him for hours.

That is the reason why the Legionnaire has come to look upon the Arab woman as the incarnation of the devil.

It also explains why "March or die" has become one of the watchwords of the Legion. The marches that these men perform are little short of miraculous. The minimum day's march is forty kilometres—about thirty miles—and this with a heavy knapsack and arms. A very telling description of one of these marches is given:

MARCHING MACHINES.

With each mile it became quieter post-mortem examination of the Army surgeon stated that the bursting of an artery in the brain had been the cause of death.

The author, in the course of his grim, though wonderfully interesting narrative, does not hesitate to remind France that she drives too hard a bargain with the poor fellows who are forced to seek the hospitality of the Foreign Legion, and it would be difficult to imagine a more telling indictment than that presented in his book.—London Answers.

HUMP TO MARK CRIMINALS.

Paris Doctor Would Inject Paraffine for Shoulder "Signs"

A Paris physician, Doctor Icard, has announced his invention of a new method for identifying criminals. It consists of a paraffine injection, by which the convict can be readily recognized.

After taking his measure by the Bertillon process, Doctor Icard suggests that a small quantity of paraffine be injected under the skin of the convicted person. The injection forms a small hump, which does not endanger the person's health, but which he keeps all his life and which looks like a natural excrescence.

According to the doctor's scheme a regular sign language could be arranged. It might be agreed the world over that the right shoulder blade be reserved for operations. It could be divided into three parts. The upper might be reserved for humps denoting "very dangerous," the middle for "dangerous," the lower for "less dangerous." And a detective could easily take hold of a man's shoulder and feel for the hump.

Although Doctor Icard has more possibilities of his paraffine process, he seems to have overlooked the fact that a criminal thus branded would be apt immediately to suspect that the person who "felt" him. Besides, would the hump be felt through a coat? So far nothing has been heard concerning the Government's attitude toward the new invention.

FRENCH POPULATION GROWS.

Suburbs Drawing From Congested Districts of Paris.

The publication of the first results of the census which recently was taken throughout France rather gives the lie to the pessimistic view generally taken of late years regarding the danger of the depopulation of the country.

Two facts stand out from the reports received so far. One is the decided tendency toward a partial abandonment of the land in favor of urban districts and the other is the decentralization of the most crowded sections of large cities. The heart of Paris, for instance, is getting less thickly populated, while the suburbs are receiving the benefit of the exodus and are growing steadily.

Throughout France the figures show a slow but general growth in the population. The most notable increase has taken place at Nancy and Toulouse, due, without doubt, to the growing prosperity of the eastern frontier. It is safe to say already that when all the returns are in it will be shown that the population of France has considerably grown since the last census in 1906.

Murray's 1910 deep-sea exploration in the North Atlantic, we notice that with a very delicate Helland-Hansen photometric apparatus, the influence of light was detected clearly at 300 fathoms, faintly at 500 fathoms, and not at all at 900 fathoms. While this extends what has hitherto been regarded as the light limit, it does not affect our picture of the great abysses, where there is not only eternal winter but eternal night. With the numerous luminescent animals in certain regions, it may sometimes, perhaps, resemble the ill-lighted suburbs of a town on a very dark night. It is absolutely calm, for the great storms are relatively shallow in their reach. There is no sound at all to break the eternal silence. There is not even scenery, but a dreary expanse of undulating sweeps like flat and dunes or desert country, interrupted at wide distances by a ridge or a cone rising to the surface. What a picture the explorers have given of the dark, calm, silent, dreary and monotonous world of the Deep Sea.

PEOPLED MARINE WORLD.

"But the picture grows in impressiveness when we recognize that this deep-sea world is richly peopled. There are more animals at moderate depths, and most where the bottom is covered with calcareous ooze which extends to about 2,000 fathoms, but wherever the long arm of the dredge has reached down, there it has found life. Sir John Murray has been recently working a large otter trawl with great success at the extraordinary depth of 2,820 fathoms (over three miles), and even in the deepest depths there is fauna.

STRUGGLE FOR EXISTENCE.

"But as there are no plants, since there is no light, the general habit of life is carnivorous and the struggle for existence is keen. And since they cannot all be eating one another, the fundamental food supply of the deep-sea fauna is to be looked for in that ceaseless rain of atoms, killed at the surface by vicissitudes of temperature and the like, and sinking, as they die, slowly through, it may be miles of water like snowflakes on a quiet winter day. To this we have also to add that there seem to be no bacteria in the deep sea and therefore no rottonness. Everything that sinks down is eaten or dissolved in this universe clearing house.

VALUE OF SEA RESEARCH.

"In one of his last writings Herbert Spencer complained of the unreflective mood among cultured and uncultured alike, 'which does not perceive with what mysteries we are surrounded.' 'By those who know much, more than by those who know little, is there felt the need of explanation.' 'What,' for instance, 'must one say of the life, minute, multitudinous, degraded, which, covering the ocean floor, occupies by far the greater part of the earth's area; and which, yet, growing and decaying in utter darkness, presents hundreds of species of a single type.' What is the deeper significance of the abyssal fauna?"

"In the first place it seems useful to remind ourselves that a knowledge of the deep sea has cut into human life; it has been of value to mankind—practically, in com-libraries, and in fact everything that may tend to public good. Opium smoking and gambling of all sorts are to be strictly prohibited.

The construction of the city was commenced in April, 1909, and quite a large number of buildings have been erected, including police and fire brigade stations, a large number of residences and business buildings. The work on the breakwater progressed rapidly for a time, but at present is delayed for financial reasons. In fact, at present nearly all work has ceased until it is certain what course toward the city is to be followed by the Chinese Government.

CHARTS FOR AIR VOYAGERS.

French Commission Presents Plan for All Governments.

A permanent aerial navigation commission, empowered to elaborate a system of air charts, recently reported to the French Minister of Public Works a plan which the commission suggests should be adopted by all the Governments of the world in order to ensure its effectiveness.

The system counts longitude from zero to 136 degrees west and east from the Behring meridian, and latitude from zero to 180 from south to north, starting from the South pole.

The charts will be cut according to meridians and parallels, each chart including one degree of longitude and one degree of latitude. Corresponding land maps will be laid out with the special aim of aiding aeroplanes in times of fog.

PIANO TUNERS IN SIAM.

Piano tuners appear to have a good time in Siam. In the recently published journal of Mme. Jottrand, the wife of a French official in Bangkok, she notes as a most important event "a visit from the gentleman who condescends to tune our piano." The arrival of this important personage, who has just landed from Singapore, is eagerly looked forward to, and so great is the demand for his services that he extorts 50 francs for tuning an instrument. After leaving here he proceeds to the Siamese Malay States and from thence to Borneo, Sarawak, the Federal Malay States and then back to Singapore. Not a bad record for a piano tuner.—London Chronicle.

TREASURED TREES.

Two trees to be seen in the main street of Thorshavn, the capital of the Faroe Islands, have an interesting history. Trees resolutely refuse to grow in these islands, except in some few sheltered spots, and the inhabitants therefore prize them greatly. When the road was made it was decided to leave the trees in the middle of the carriage way rather than be guilty of the crime of felling them.

A MANICURE PARLOR.

The Blaine public school in Minneapolis, which was the first school to instal a bathroom, now has a manicure parlor. By order of the board of education a corner of the bathroom has been partitioned off and here the pupils may repair to brush their hair and manicure their hands. The board employs an attendant to take charge of the baths and instruct the children in the art of manicuring and toilet-making.

THE FARMS OF PALESTINE

COLONIES OF JEWS HAVE POPULATION OF 50,000.

Settlements Have Been Founded Wherever Suitable Land Was Found.

When the Holy Land was visited by the late Sir James Montefiore in 1827, the Jewish population of Palestine numbered about 500—a figure then considered to be an enormous one. Some 80 years later we find a Palestine boasting of a Jewish population of over 50,000—a truly remarkable metamorphosis. The majority of these came from Russia, Roumania and Galicia, from which countries they fled from persecution and tyranny.

It is these very refugees who have turned the country in and around Palestine into a veritable "garden of Eden," and such places as Tiberias, Galilee, Safed and Hebron, which not many years ago were considered places better fitted for the antiquarian and the archaeologist for the purpose of research than for the civilized inhabitant, are to-day prosperous Jewish colonies. With the financial assistance and advice of the Rothschilds and other wealthy members of the Jewish race in Europe and in the United States, settlements have been founded wherever suitable land could be obtained, and, as a result, there are to-day exceedingly over 30 of these settlements west of

THE JORDAN ALONE.

The most important and largest of these settlements or colonies is that of Zichron, which alone comprises 2,400 acres, and which boasts of a population of some 1,100 souls. A well-known Englishman who visited the country eloquently remarks that the development of these beautiful and picturesque agricultural colonies is a romance of realism. Millions of vine and fig trees, olive trees, citron trees and orange trees have been planted, "while vast numbers of young mulberry trees are now feeding silk worms." Zichron is a sort of miniature Palestinian Paris, for the people here live somewhat luxuriously. Their great wine cellars, stored with wine and brandy manufactured here, almost rival those of Bischoff. This is truly a garden city, for it has a magnificent garden in the centre.

Here is a "live" answer to those who constantly declare that the Jews as farmers and agriculturists are hopeless failures. Among the innumerable other superb plantations may be mentioned the Rischon-le-Zion colony (near the port of Jaffa), the Ekron, Rehoboth, Schweiah and Emel-Dschmal colonies. Although not quite so large as the Zichron colony, and unable to boast of so large a population, Rischon is, nevertheless, considered to be

THE "PARENT" SETTLEMENT.

Founded in 1882, with the assistance of a loan granted by Baron Edmond de Rothschild (which has already been paid off), there are now already planted there as many as 200,000 mulberry trees and over half a million vines. This colony also boasts of a hospital, library and institute, and many other educational establishments. A traveler might thus make his way over Pal-

AN "AFFAIR OF HONOR."

A Second Describes How One Was Conducted in France.

Those affairs of honor, impressively called duels in France, need have little terror for the friends of peace. More bloodless battles were never fought. An American living in Paris was asked by a French marquis to act as his second in a duel to which he had been challenged by a Russian general. The occasion of the challenge was that the marquis had gossiped too freely about a broken engagement and a suspected theft of the Russian. The seconds of the Russian were a colonel and a baron from his own country. The formal meeting of the four seconds is reported in the Independent.

There seems to be a point of etiquette in dress and make-up. A frock or morning coat, tall hat, gloves, and with or without cane, was the proper dress for these meetings. Not up in French fastidiousness, we wore a straw hat and lounge coat, and so were a little off.

The meeting lasted nearly two hours. The point that the Russian general had lost caste and was no gentleman we insisted upon. "We," that is, our confrere, for we ourselves kept silent, wondering at all the tomfoolery until the Russian baron produced the pedigree of the challenger.

It was in English, typewritten, and several years old. It had been visited by a Russian consul. This document was handed us to be read aloud. His various titles, his many advancements from a lieutenant to a generalship were rehearsed, but not a word about his commands and services.

At the close we were asked what we thought about it. We replied that it was well written and read well, but in itself carried no proof that its statements were true. Thereupon the Russian colonel asked bluntly what was the real trouble. Then our confrere rehearsed the story of the broken engagement and the stolen jewels.

The conclusion was that the Russian seconds would write to their country for proofs that the challenger had no taint, but was a gentleman whom another gentleman might deliberately shoot at in the Bois du Boulogne.

More than a month passed and no word. Finally our principal wrote a letter to himself and another to the two Russian seconds which threw over the duel. These two letters my confrere copied, then he and I signed them and mailed them. Thus ended an "affair of honor," and with it the rather dubious honor of being a second.

A RUTHLESS VETERAN.

An Instance Which Shows His Harsh and Cruel Nature.

Lord Anglesey, who was wounded at the Battle of Waterloo, was a man of hasty temper, as several stories related by his grandson, Admiral Montagu, in his "Reminiscences," serve to show. One of these, the admiral declares, always made his "coat stand up like a Scotch terrier's," and he found it hard to excuse his grandfather's action. Others will agree with the admiral that his grandfather's action was needlessly harsh, and therefore cruel.

My grandfather had long enjoyed the services of a very faithful val-

SOME TOPSY-TURVY CUSTOMS OF THE JAPANESE.

Curious Reversal of Western Methods Is Seen In Their System of Names.

Topsy-turvy is a word which seems strangely out of place when applied to a people so highly civilized and up-to-date as the modern Japanese. Nevertheless, they do many things in a way so directly opposed to Western notions of what is right and proper that the term is really quite excusable.

Take the simple matters of etiquette and form. In Japan the left and not the right is the side and place of honor; white, and not black, is the appropriate color of mourning; to smack the lips when eating or drinking is a remark of polite appreciation.

Politeness, too, prompts the Japanese to remove not their hats but their shoes when paying friendly calls. As for giving place to women, such a thing is quite unknown in the land of the Mikado; men are most emphatically the superior sex.

If anyone doubts it, let him witness the spectacle—not by any means a common one—of a Japanese husband taking his wife for an outing. The chances are a hundred to one that hubby gets into his rickshaw first and bowls gaily away, leaving his wife to get into hers as best she can, and to follow respectfully behind.

SYSTEM OF NAMES.

The order of the family and Christian names is exactly the opposite of ours. Thus William Jones would be Jones William, and his title—Mr., Dr., Professor, or whatever it might be—would follow. This principle, which is that of putting the general before the particular, is seen at its best in the addressing of correspondence.

A Japanese, writing to his friend P. Doublyou in Tokio, would address his envelope as follows: "Japan, Tokio, Akasaka District, such-and-such-a Street, 17 Number, P. Doublyou, Mr."

The same sort of thing occurs in the construction of sentences. Speaking generally, it may be said that the order of thought in a Japanese sentence is exactly the reverse of ours. Hence in translating Japanese into English it is often just as well to begin at the end of the sentence and work backwards. As with sentences, so with books.

Japanese books all begin at what we should call the end, and finish up where we would expect the title-page to be. Foot-notes, if any, are placed at the top of the page, and the reader inserts his book-marker at the bottom. Strangest of all, a large full stop is placed at the beginning of each paragraph.

Another but very different example of the "contrariness" of our allies is seen in their

TREATMENT OF HORSES.

The whole system of horse-management in Japan is the very opposite of ours. A Japanese, for example, unless trained in quite a modern school, never thinks of mounting his steed from the left hand; he always does so from the right. On the right side also are fastened all the parts of the harn-

A FIGHT WITH A SWORDFISH

NEWSPAPER REPORTER TELLS OF HIS EXPERIENCE.

It Is Dangerous Sport, But the Excitement Is Worth All the Risk.

The swordfish is not only good eating, but good hunting as well, and the bronzed fishermen who pursue this game sometimes hospitably allow a guest to go with them to where the swordfish are to be found. A reporter for the Boston Transcript has described his adventure with a crew of swordfishermen. The sole requirements were that he should report at four o'clock in the morning, and be able to haul in four hundred pounds of fish.

After some hours of sailing, suddenly came the cry, "There he be! Eighth of a mile to the east'rd."

Straining my eyes, writes the reporter, I caught a glimpse of a black fin like a shark's going through the water. It seemed as if some submarine craft were passing just below the surface. Suddenly the fish leaped into the air, turned a graceful curve, and then plunged into the side of an oncoming wave.

A DORY WAS LAUNCHED.

The harpoon line was cleared, and then silence. The fish seemed to be taking a siesta. Jim was directly over it when he struck his blow. He did not throw the harpoon; he simply rammed it into the broad back with an "Ungh!"

A swirl of spray, and all trace of the fish was gone. The harpoon line, which was wound round a small keg, was hastily thrown overboard. "Art" leaped into the dory, and I scrambled after him.

We rowed to the keg. It was spinning like a top as the fish drew out the line. We plunged down a watery slope, and as we shot up to the top of the next wave the keg was in the bottom of the dory.

Standing on a piece of sheet iron to protect me in case the fish ran its sword through the bottom of the boat, I wound the line round my hands. When it tightened, the jerk nearly pulled me into the water, and off we started. The fight was on.

I let out the line. It burned my hands. Zip! I grabbed the keg. Then I caught the rope again. Fortunately there were forty fathoms of it, and when it came taut with a snap, I had had a chance to get a firm grip. As it was I nearly lost my balance. Recovering, I could feel the quiver of the four hundred pounds of muscle at the other end.

Now here, now there it swam, taking us up and down over the waves. My back ached and my arms became lead. Every now and then the fish could be seen at the top of the waves ahead of us. Then, like a salmon,

IT WOULD TURN SUDDENLY

and dart off in another direction. The dory would spin round, and again I would almost be pulled overboard.

Suddenly the line began to point downward, and soon it was vertical. The fish was directly under us. "He's gone to the bottom!" Art burst out. "Look out now! This is bad. He may come up through now already planted there as many as 200,000 mulberry trees and over half a million vines. This colony also boasts of a hospital, library and institute, and many other educational establishments. A traveler might thus make his way over Palestine, north, south, east and west, and yet wherever he may cast his startled eyes, these miniature Palestinian Parisés will be espied on all sides. In this way Zionists all over the world hope to gain back the land of their fathers. The further prosecution of this work, however, is at its present stage becoming gradually somewhat more difficult owing to the extreme hostile attitude of the Turkish officials in regard to the sale of land.

The passport limiting the stay of all foreign Jews in Palestine to three months is still in vogue, and with these and other restrictions are now compelled to drop their lofty ideals and aspirations; it is hoped, however, for but a short time. The Young Turks are extremely jealous of their power, and are determined to maintain the integrity of their heterogeneous empire against possible complications. But it may be confidently stated that if the Young Turks selfishly intend to limit Jewish enterprise and activity in the empire in this fashion it is then clearly evident to the most optimistic and sympathetic onlooker that the consummation of the economic and material regeneration of the Turkish Empire will become utterly impossible.—London Strand.

WOMAN IN PORTUGAL.

Her Sphere Elastic Both in Cities and Rural Districts.

A good part of the farm work in Portugal is performed by the women, who see no reason why they should regard digging, hoeing and plowing as the work of men alone. The man who owns a few acres of land will often leave its cultivation to his wife and daughters, while he labors as a carpenter, stone mason or cooper, for cask-making is one of their important industries. Women share in the heavy work of the cities as well. There are female porters, laborers on the docks, market tenders, and even women coal heavers, fishermen, or rather fisherwomen, and sailors. They are strong and hardy as their husbands and brothers. Of course, it rather takes away the glamor of romance when one sees a young woman with finely chiseled features and beautiful black eyes, digging with a spade or heaving a basket of coal with as much ease as the girl plays tennis and golf. They seem happy under what we would consider hard circumstances.

GROWTH OF FRENCH CITIES.

The results of the French census taken during the first week of March indicate the general growth of the cities at the expense of the country districts. Thus the Department of Yonne's population has diminished since 1906 from 322,153 to 300,741. All important centres in the Department of Saone et Loire show gains, while the villages have fallen off. The same drift citywards is taking place in the Department of the Rhone. The City of Lyons gained 59,639, now having a population of 520,795. The suburbs of Lyons also show an increase from 88,251 to 99,209.

it hard to excuse his grandfather's action. Others will agree with the admiral that his grandfather's action was needlessly harsh, and therefore cruel.

My grandfather had long enjoyed the services of a very faithful valet, to whom, I believe, he was much attached, although he certainly "dissembled his love" with some success. One very cold morning, when he was writing at his table, he noticed that the fire was low, and rang the bell for more coals. In walked his valet.

"Coals!" Put more coals on the fire!" said his lordship, shortly.

Out went the valet in search of fuel; but as he seemed to be taking an unusually long time bringing the coal-scuttle, Lord Anglesey became impatient, and rang furiously at the bell. In walked a powdered funkey with the coals and made up the fire.

"Send Stephen here immediately!" thundered his lordship; and when the faithful valet arrived:

"Stephen," said Lord Anglesey, "my orders to you were to put coals on the fire. You have not obeyed my orders, but have deputed that funkey to do so instead. Stephen, how long have you been in my service?"

"Thirty-three years, my lord," said the trembling valet.

My grandfather took out his watch.

"I see that it is half past twelve," he murmured, contemplatively. "Stephen, how long will it take you to pack up your things and leave my house?"

Poor Stephen, being much taken aback, was unable to get a word out.

"Very well, then," continued the old autocrat, "I will give you one hour. At half past one I expect you to be gone."

Probably those old veterans were very full of gout, or had become so accustomed to unquestioning obedience that they could not brook the slightest opposition; but it made a very strong and painful impression upon my youthful mind.

LIGHT ON LONDON.

Fifteen Londoners (England) are born every hour, and nine die, the total excess of births over deaths a year being about 55,000. The enormous food supplies Londoners require include 409,732 tons of meat and 241,000 tons of fish. The total population includes 142,000 paupers, 26,000 lunatics, 3,500 blind, and 2,057 deaf and dumb. Londoners pay about $75,000,000 a year in rates of various kinds, and they owe $552,992,730. Coroners, who hold inquests on 104 in every 1,000 deaths, receive $150,000 a year in salaries; there are 726,205 children on the rolls of the elementary schools, and these receive instruction from 4,351 teachers. For dogs, 63,661 persons pay licenses, 13,496 for armorial bearings, 20,117 for male servants, and 49,522 for carriages; whilst 12,300 auctioneers and 4,035 pawnbrokers are licensed.

FUNERAL WREATHS.

The fashion of sending great quantities of wreaths to funerals is on the decline in Paris, and as the result 5,000 to 6,000 workmen and workwomen, on whom 18,000 persons depend, are unemployed. The decline in the vogue of the wreath is traced to a well known Paris preacher, who urged bereaved relatives to spend their money on masses for the dead instead of flowers.

posite of ours. A Japanese, for example, unless trained in quite a modern school, never thinks of mounting his steed from the left hand; he always does so from the right. On the right side also are fastened all the parts of the harness; the mane, on the other hand, is made to hang on the left.

To crown all, the horse, when brought home to its stable, is usually, though not always, placed with its head where its tail ought to be, and is fed from a crib at the stable door.

The Japanese builder, too, has his little peculiarities, for when starting on a house he always begins with the roof. When this is finished he takes it to pieces, numbers the sections, and puts it aside until the rest of the structure is completed.

The women of Japan are quite as unorthodox as the men in some of their ways. The Japanese needlewoman "needles her thread" instead of threading her needle; that is to say, she draws the eye of the needle over the end of the thread instead of pushing the thread through the eye of the needle, as is usually done.

And in sewing, instead of running the needle through the cloth she holds the needle perfectly still and runs the cloth upon it.—Pearson's Weekly.

HELP EACH OTHER.

If we tried to help each other
Just a little every day,
How endeared to one another
We should go upon our way!

Conscious that however meagre
Was the service we had done,
Someone's heart would still be eager

With the thanks that we had won.

Just a service here and yonder,
Just a hand with all goodwill;
Helping those who pause and ponder
How to struggle up the hill.

Pass not by the weak and friendless,
Haste not by the blind and lame;
Work of such a kind is endless—
Do it now for very shame!

WHY A HORSE ROLLS.

Horses are fond of rolling on the ground, and no animal more thoroughly shakes itself than they do. After a roll they give themselves a shake or two to remove anything adhering to the coat. The habit is of much service to horses living in open plains. On being turned loose at the end of a journey an Arab horse rolls in the sand, which acts as blotting paper, absorbing exudations from the body. A shake removes the sand, and the coat soon dries. Cavalrymen in hot climates sometimes put sand on their horses as the simplest and quickest way of drying them.

CHINA'S SPLENDID PAPERS.

One of the most remarkable advances the Chinese have made is in the character of their newspapers. It was not many years ago that the newspapers of China were not to be compared with those of Japan, but I would to-day rather read a Chinese newspaper than any foreign newspaper that reaches the Empire, writes a Shanghai correspondent. They contain as much news as many of the papers of Europe, and their policies, editorial and otherwise, are vigorous.

board. Suddenly the line began to point downward, and soon it was vertical. The fish was directly under us. "He's gone to the bottom!" Art burst out. "Look out now! This is bad. He may come up through the dory so quick that—here he comes now!"

In the next instant I was sent sprawling in the bottom of the dory amid oars, hand-nets, tholepins, gaff-hooks, rope-ends and water. Then drenching spray slapped me on the back.

We could see the huge, sleek body darting just under the surface. The crisis of the catch was at hand. Once the fish shot right under the bow.

"You gaff him the next time!" Art commanded. Picking up a heavy, cruel-looking hook with a stout ash handle some six feet in length, I waited my chance.

"Here he comes!" cried Art. I swung at a black flash, and jumping to the other side, swung again. Both times I missed. The third try brought the hook deep into the broad back. I felt as if I had hold of the hind hoof of a kicking horse. Water flew in every direction. It seemed as if I could never keep my grip on the gaff.

"HOLD ON! HOLD ON!"

Art bellowed, picking up another gaff with his right hand, while in his left he held the yanking harpoon line. Then he, too, hooked his gaff in the broad back. I could hear it crunch. With difficulty he worked it loose, and drove it into the gills. For a second or two the fish, which was almost as long as the dory, was quiet. We both gasped for breath.

By order of Art, I grabbed a slip-knot out of the water in the bottom of the boat. Reaching over the side, after many failures I got the loop over the wide tail. As I hauled the line tight the stunned fish came to. Bang! bang! bang! The powerful body beat against the side of the dory. Masses of hard, white water lashed both of us. I ducked my head to avoid it, and hauled. Art belabored the fish with his heavy gaff. The boat was rapidly filling with water. It seemed as if the sides of the boat would be staved in. Then all was still. I opened my eyes. Art was wiping his face with his shirt-sleeve.

"That fish died tough. Say, he gave us about all we wanted, eh?"

SHIP'S ENGINES.

The trial trip of the tramp steamer Vulcanus, built in Holland for trade with Borneo, and equipped solely with internal combustion engines, marks, according to the Engineer of London, the first clear step in a new epoch. There are many boats propelled by internal combustion engines, but they are nearly all pleasure craft or vessels which do not venture far from home. The Vulcanus is a regular seagoing ship, although her engines are of only 500 horse power. It is predicted that within ten years large steamers driven by internal combustion engines will be seen crossing the Atlantic. Yet doubt is expressed whether such engines can be applied to develop more than about 24,000 horse-power in a ship. If it be so, extremely large vessels will continue to be driven by engines of the old type.

SALE OF DEADLY WEAPONS

Cannot Buy Pistol or Dagger Without Permit From Police.

A despatch from Toronto says: As a result of the Italian murder in Toronto on Good Friday evening and the increase in the number of crimes among foreigners in the province generally, the Ontario Government has decided that the sale of offensive weapons in the Province is to be strictly regulated, and in some cases entirely prohibited. Commencing with last Saturday, every person who exposes for sale or sells any bowie-knife, dirk, dagger, stiletto, metal knuckles, skull-cracker or sling-shot, or who sells a revolver, pistol or air-gun to any person other than the holder of a certificate from the Provincial or other police stating that he is entitled to purchase any of those things, is liable to a fine of from $20 to $200. The purchaser is equally liable under the act. Records must be kept of all sales made, with name of purchaser, and failure to comply involves a fine of from $25 to $200. A further penalty of $50 is provided for failure to report sales every three months to the Provincial Police. Officers are given power to search people whom they have reason to believe are carrying concealed weapons, and regulations are included looking to the deportation of foreigners upon whom such weapons are found.

DROWNED IN LAKE SIMCOE.

Fred. Lepard and Two Daughters Lose Their Lives.

A despatch from Belle Ewart says: Swamped in an overcrowded boat, Fred. Lepard, a laborer, thirty-five years old, and two of his daughters, aged eight and ten years, were victims of a triple drowning accident in Lake Simcoe on Saturday evening. John Mateer, also an occupant of the boat, managed to escape with his life. The party of four crossed to Roach's Point in a small skiff about 5.30 in the afternoon, and were on the return trip two hours later when the accident occurred. The boat capsized when they were within fifty yards of the shore. Lepard and the two children were thrown into the water, but Mateer managed to cling to the boat. The young father, who was an excellent swimmer, made a desperate effort to save the little girls, and when his body was recovered it was erect in seven feet of water about three rods from land. The bodies of the children were found floating, and futile efforts were made at resuscitation. Mateer clung to the boat for half an hour until it drifted to shore. He managed to wade to land and fell in exhaustion.

A despatch from New York says: An aged and totally blind horse on Friday kicked his way through two big plate glass windows of a jeweller's store at Maiden Lane and Broadway and sent $200,000 worth of diamonds flying in all directions. Precious stones by tens of thousands of dollars' worth were swept into the street, buried amongst masses of finely broken glass. Policemen stationed at this, one of the busiest corners in down town New York, had all they could do to control the crowds that watched the proprietors and clerks madly scramble to pick the gems out of the debris.

CHILDREN GREET THE KING.

Watched for His Majesty on Ride Through Windsor Park.

A despatch from London says: When King George was taking his usual morning ride in Windsor Park on Wednesday, accompanied by Lord Charles Fitzmaurice and Sir Frederick Ponsonby, a group of merry school children lined up in the roadway, waving hats and flags and cheering boisterously. The sudden outburst startled the horses, which commenced prancing. The King, who seemed to be amused, returned the salute of the children and raised his hat to some of their mothers standing in the

A despatch from Parry Sound says: Another attempt to burn the old Seguin House property here on Wednesday morning failed through the prompt action of the fire brigade. This hotel is one of the old-time landmarks of Parry Sound, and in the early days was the only stopping house and sheltered nearly all the old-timers. Some time ago there were two fires in the house in one day, and the building was left in a partly-burned state. At 5 o'clock on Wednesday morning fire was again discovered in the unoccupied part of the house, but after a two-hour fight was extinguished.

VACCINATION COMPULSORY.

Quebec Provincial Board of Health Takes Strong Measures.

A despatch from Montreal says: Compulsory vaccination throughout the Province was on Monday afternoon decided upon by the Provincial Board of Health as a result of the sporadic outbreaks of smallpox which have been reported of late. A decree was promulgated instructing each of the fifteen hundred municipalities of Quebec Province to enforce general vaccination. Many municipalities already have such laws, but now it will be incumbent upon all the rest to pass such laws within five days after the order is received from the Provincial Board of Health. In most of the rural districts this order will be promulgated by announcement from the church doors after Mass. Within 48 hours from such announcement the law will go into effect, and every person who cannot show proof of effective vaccination within seven years will have to submit to vaccination, under a penalty of $5, with further penalties if they refuse to comply.

A merger of all the boot and shoe factories in Quebec district is now being arranged.

TERRIBLE RAILWAY WRECK

Train Plunged Through a Bridge and 32 Persons Lost Their Lives

A despatch from Grahamstown, Cape Colony, says: According to the latest estimates 32 persons were killed in the wreck of a passenger train on the Kowie Railroad when it plunged to destruction into a gorge 250 deep, through the collapse of the Blaaukrantz bridge on Saturday. In addition, many were injured, some of them fatally. It was the most appalling wreck in the history of South African railways. The rescue work involved heart-rending experiences, and entreating of the injured and dying from the debris was accompanied by terrible groans and cries. A large mass of wreckage lodged on a ledge 120 feet down, and it was many hours before all were removed from the difficult crags and hoisted in sacking to the lip of the gorge. One little girl had a miraculous escape. She was caught in a fork of the bridge and held by one foot over the ravine. The rescuers had to scale girders to the height of 200 feet to bring her down.

COAL OIL STOVE EXPLODED.

Montreal Woman Killed and Husband Severely Injured.

A despatch from Montreal says: Mrs. Alfred Bergeron, aged 41, is dead, and the husband seriously burned, as the result of the explosion of a coal oil stove at their home, 671 Demontigny Street, early on Friday morning. The burning oil was thrown all over the woman, who rushed to the street, accompanied by her husband, whose clothing also caught fire. Mrs. Bergeron succumbed to her burns after several hours of agony, she having been burned almost to a crisp. The house caught fire and was destroyed.

Ten hotel licenses have been cut off at Hamilton.

Hon. Mackenzie King has appointed Rev. C. W. Gordon of Winnipeg Chairman of the Conciliation Board appointed to deal with the coal miners' strike in the west.

LABOR LEADERS ACCUSED

Los Angeles Times and Other Outrages Charged Against Them

A despatch from Indianapolis, Indiana, says: After months of investigation, directed by William J. Burns, the San Francisco graft investigator, now head of a detective agency, John J. McNamara, International Secretary of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers of America, the headquarters of which are in Indianapolis, was arrested here late on Sunday charged with complicity in the dynamiting of The Los Angeles Times on October 1, 1910, and the plant of the Llewellyn Iron Works in Los Angeles. Four hours after McNamara was arrested the detectives found two quarts of nitro-glycerine and seventeen sticks of dynamite in a barn three-quarters of a mile west of Indianapolis. The barn, the detectives say, was rented by McNamara from T. H. Jones, the owner. A later investigation of the offices of the union disclosed in a storeroom of the basement of the building sixty-four sticks of dynamite, 200 feet of fuse, 500 dynamite caps, one dozen small alarm clocks, and a leather case made to carry a ten-pound can of nitro-glycerine. Detective Burns took possession of all the explosives.

King George Bars Old Vessels From Coronation Function.

A despatch from London says: It is King George's wish that only effective ships be paraded in the Coronation review at Spithead June 24, so there are being made no attempts to swell the numbers with ancient obsolescent hulks that are fit only for harbor service, as sometimes occur on these occasions. The probability is that merely the four divisions of the Home and Atlantic fleets, with the attached cruiser squadrons, the destroyer and submarine flotillas, with their attendant auxiliaries, will be assembled. That would total over 300 vessels. There would be 33 battleships, 36 armored cruisers, 7 protected cruisers, 14 unarmored cruisers, 31 auxiliaries, 116 destroyers, 36 torpedo boats, 47 submarines. The battleships are all less than ten years old, except seven of the Majestic class.

German Saloon Keeper Jailed for Selling Froth Instead of Beer.

A despatch from Munich, Germany, says: Serving short measure in beer, and the deception of the public by filling the "steins" and "seidels" with froth so as to form what is popularly known as a "collar," has just been judged an offence punishable by imprisonment by the Criminal Court here. The tenant of a gigantic beer house, who was arraigned on a charge of defrauding the public in this way, was sentenced to six weeks in jail and a fine of $750, and five of his waiters to terms of from one to three weeks in jail. Evidence showed that it has become customary to serve glasses of beer in which the liquor did not reach the legally stamped mark indicating the proper measure, the drinking vessels being filled to the top with a large quantity of froth. In this way the profits of the house were greatly increased. The public, however, indignantly demurred, and to such an extent that a virtual beer strike was brought about, and many hitherto most popular drinking resorts have been practically deserted. The suit, instituted by several customers, lasted more than five months.

$3,600 in Cash Prizes for Farmers

Tell Us How You Did It

You may win a prize by doing so

SUPPOSE your friend Bob Wilson, on the next concession, "pulled up" at your front gate on the way back from market and asked about that silo or barn foundation you built, you would be glad to tell him, wouldn't you? And it wouldn't take you long, either, would it? And, as a matter of fact, you'd find as much pleasure telling him as he would in listening—isn't that right?

First you would take him over to view the silo or barn foundation. Then you would start to describe it—its dimensions—the kind of aggregate used—the proportions of cement used—number of men employed—number of hours' working time required—method of mixing—kind of forms used—method of reinforcing, if any—and finally, what the job cost. So that by the time you finished, neighbor Wilson would have a pretty accurate idea of how to go about building the particular piece of work which you described.

Now couldn't you do the same for us, with this difference—that you stand a good chance of getting well paid for your time?

In Prize "D" of our contest, open to the farmers of Canada, we offer $100.00 to the farmer in each Province who will furnish us with the best and most complete description of how any particular piece of concrete work shown by photograph sent in was done. The size of the work described makes no difference. The only important thing to remember is that the work must be done in 1911 and "CANADA" Cement used.

In writing your description, don't be too particular about grammar or spelling or punctuation. Leave that to literary folk. Tell it to us as you would tell it to your neighbor. What we want are the facts, plainly and clearly told.

Sounds simple, doesn't it? And it is simple. And surely it is well worth your while when you think of the reward in view.

Now sit right down, take your pen or pencil—fill out the attached coupon—or a post-card if it's handier—and write for the circular which fully describes the conditions of this, the first contest of the kind ever held in Canada.

Every dealer who handles "CANADA" Cement will also be given a supply of these circulars—and you can get one from the dealer in your town, if that seems more convenient than writing for it.

Contest will close on November 15th, 1911—all photos and descriptions must be sent in by that date, to be eligible for one of these prizes. Awards will be made as soon as possible thereafter. The decisions will be made by a disinterested committee, the following gentlemen having consented to act for us, as the jury of award: Prof. Peter Gillespie, Lecturer in Theory of Construction, University of Toronto; Prof. W. H. Day, Professor of Physics, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph; and Ivan S. Macdonald, Editor of "Construction."

Having decided to compete for one of the prizes, your first step should be to get all the information you can on the subject of Concrete Construction on the Farm. Fortunately, most of the pointers that anyone can possibly need, are contained in our wonderfully complete book, entitled "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete." A large number of Canadian farmers have already sent for and obtained copies of this free book. Have you got your copy yet? If not, you'd better send for one to-day. Whether you are a contestant for one of our prizes or not, you really ought to have this book in your library. For it contains a vast amount of information and hints that are invaluable to the farmer.

Please send full particulars and book.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

cured Mrs. C. C. Gokey, of a stubborn case of heart disease, such as thousands are now suffering with. Read what she says:

"Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had grown so weak that it was impossible for me to do thirty minutes work in a whole day. I suffered intense pains in my left side and under the left shoulder blade. I could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath that I thought I should never be able to take a full breath again. The least excitement would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half-bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. I began to sleep well, had a good appetite, and improved so rapidly that when I had taken six bottles I was completely cured."

ATTAINING OLD AGE.

Almost a Certainty If You Carefully Follow These Rules.

In a book on health, written by a famous Hungarian physician and translated into almost every modern tongue, one reads the following advice on how a comparatively healthy person may live to be at least 85 or 90 years old, with a good possibility of exceeding the century mark:

Marriage is an invaluable aid in the struggle against old age. If married life is one of the best means of resisting the approach of old age, on the other hand, it is positively certain that unhappy marriages are the surest means of hastening its oncoming.

To avoid premature old age and early death we have to follow these rules:

Wear loose collars, because a tight collar presents obstacles to the free circulation of the blood through the thyroid.

Do not take too much meat, because abundance of meat alters the ductless glands.

Take large quantities of milk, this being the extract of various glands, and especially that of the thyroid.

Be as much as possible in the open air, and especially in the sunshine, and take plenty of exercise, taking care to breathe deeply and regularly.

Take a bath daily and, in addition, once a week or every two weeks take a Turkish or vapor bath.

Wear porous clothing and a light hat.

Go early to bed and rise early.

Sleep in a very dark, very quiet room and with a window open, and do not sleep less than six or more than seven and a half hours.

Have one complete day's rest in each week, without even reading or writing.

Avoid mental disturbances or worries.

Be temperate in the use of alcohol and also in the use of coffee or tea.

Avoid places that are overheated, especially by steam, and badly ventilated.

Peterboro Review.

The Georges in Toronto have contributed about $50 to date to the King's gift fund. Toronto Georges may be good, but they certainly won't be arrested on a charge of too much generosity.

Galt Reformer.

The restoration of the model schools by the Education Department does not come as a surprise to those who have been following the floundering course of the education Executive of the Province during the last few years.

Prince Rupert Optimist.

It is one of the amazing things to contemplate, that the people of a country should have to be argued with by the Government to induce them to see that a proposal to remove $3,000,000 taxes from their food bill is a wholly desirable thing.

Toronto Globe.

This is the season when the commercial fate of every hotelkeeper in Ontario hangs in the balance. Of course there are some hotels which Commissioners would never think of closing, but there is generally a possibility of proprietors being ordered to sell out.

Kingston Standard.

We always thought they made a mistake in moving the capital from Kingston to Ottawa. Now we know it. Whatever her other faults Kingston knows enough not to indulge in a smallpox and a typhoid epidemic at one and the same time. Ottawa evidently is in need of a thorough house-cleaning.

Windsor Record.

Outdoor exercise, of which walking is the simplest and one of the most beneficial forms, is within the reach of everybody. In the larger cities people become slaves to the street car habit. The craze for rapid transit has encouraged slothfulness among city dwellers, and legarthy of the limbs has in many cases resulted in legarthy of the whole physical system.

Ottawa Free Press.

Can the Conservative party afford to be placed upon record as preventing the Premier's attendance at the Imperial Conference? We trow not, but anyway a few days will show what action they are going to take. But they must not forget that if they follow such a course they will be accepting a grave responsibility for which they will have to account to the people.

Calgary Albertan.

The Conservative newspapers spend a portion of their time in arguing that the farmers will sell no produce across the line when reciprocity comes, and the other half in arguing that they will sell so much that they will forget there is a Canada or a mother country, or anything but a United States. They are rather selfish in taking both ends of it, particularly as both are very, very wrong.

Hamilton Spectator.

We are accustomed in Canada to pride ourselves upon what we are pleased to call our superiority over our American cousins in matters political. Also it is our habit to commiserate with them upon what we term their abject slavery to party system and party machine in municipal as well as

MODERN CRUSOES.

Robinson Has Had Plenty of More Recent Imitators.

There has been more than one attempt on the part of modern Crusoes to isolate themselves from the world. A Spaniard named Rodriguez settled, in 1884, on an islet off the southwest coast of Cuba, taking solemn oath that there he would remain until his death. He kept his vow for two years; and but for a cyclone, accompanied by a tidal wave, which destroyed his tent and entire stock of provisions, he would undoubtedly have remained till his death. He was on the point of starvation when rescued, and he was, much against his will, removed from his islet.

One of the most interesting attempts at self-exile whereof there is an record was that made by one Macintosh, a religious fanatic, but an exceptionally energetic man, whose headstrong conduct brought him into conflict with the authorities of Sydney, Australia. He disappeared from that city and was found a year later on an uninhabited island of the Marquesas group in the West Indies. How he got there was not known; but he had made good use of his time, for he had cultivated a small tract of land, erected a neat cabin, and maintained a score of pigs. He resolutely refused to quit his little kingdom, declaring ironically that he preferred to "rule pigs than be ruled by them."

A wager was the cause of the voluntary exile of one Moma Lebedieff, an officer of the Czar's Guards, who left St. Petersburg in 1900 for Red Island, in Udkaya Bay, in the Sea of Okhotsk, where he undertook to remain a whole year. The difficulty in winning the wager lay in the frightful climate of the island, which is in the same latitude as Central Kamchatka. Lebedieff lived alone for six months; but in January, 1901, being unable to withstand the cold, then at its worst, he abandoned the attempt. After incurring frightful hardships, he succeeded in reaching Nikolaievsk, at the mouth of the Amur River. Sooner than spend the remainder of the winter in the awful darkness and solitude of Red Island, he paid his opponent thirty-five thousand dollars.

In the '80's, an Englishman named Chandler lived alone on an islet of the Ladrone group, in the Pacific, for a year and a half. Chandler, an avowed misanthrope, threatened to shoot the man who should invade his domain. For sixteen months he lived on the fruits and herbs grown upon the islet. Then he went mad. The master of the American trading bark Louisa, when six miles west of the island, observed Chandler through a glass, capering and dancing stark naked. He took the exile aboard and landed him at Manila. When Chandler recovered he insisted on returning to his islet. He left San Francisco in 1884, and was never more heard of.

An island in the Sea of Aral, near the mouth of the Oxus, was the strange place of refuge selected by one Zingler, a Berlin fur trader of considerable wealth, who, to use his own words, "suffered from civilization sickness." In 1895, Zingler repaired to the island in the Sea of Aral, and gave to it the name of "Eternity," as it was part of his doctrine that only by self-communion could man attain to perfection fitting him for immortal life.

In 1905, Signor Cortesi, a highly esteemed merchant of Milan, announced that he had found a modern Garden of Eden somewhere in the Adriatic and proposed, in the company of his wife, to establish himself there permanently. Accordingly he completed arrangements to take up his Crusoe-like experience, and so far as is known, he is still there.

Queer Ways in Anam.

Mme. Gabrielle M. Vassal, the wife of a French doctor who was attached to the Pasteur Institute of Nhatrang, a little village on the coast of Anam, relates some of her experiences. When she and her husband arrived a Nhatrang they were received by the native servants, who salaamed and squatted on the floor for a long period, this being their method of greeting Europeans. Servants had the curious habit of washing all dishes under the table, never on its top. Men and women dressed alike, wearing trousers and tunics, and women on the way to market with their baskets always walked in single file.

Repairing a Crown.

What curious old records one comes across sometimes in unexpected ways! Here is one which has reference to Edward III. and Philippa of Hainault and is kept, with other documents, at Harwich, their majesties having had at the time a palace at Felixstowe. It runs thus: "For repairing ye queen's crown which ye king threw into ye fire, item 3s. 6d." The points which strike one in this memorandum are the violence of the king's temper and the cheapness of the mending process.—London Graphic.

to pride ourselves upon what we are pleased to call our superiority over our American cousins in matters political. Also it is our habit to commiserate with them upon what we term their abject slavery to party system and party machine in municipal as well as State and Federal affairs. But are we so superior, and have we the right to thus commiserate?

Windsor Record.

The indiscriminate use of slang is deplorable enough when it comes from male lips, but it grates on the ears when uttered by the daughters of Eve. It robs womanhood of one element that has commanded the respect of mankind—refinement. A woman has as much right for freedom of speech as a man and she usually exercises the prerogative, but the slangy girl blocks her own advancement by displaying her lack of culture.

The Belleville Ontario.

The deeper that scientists delve into the secrets of the universe the more they realize how little they know and how little they can ever know of the profound mysteries that surround them. More powerful telescopes and more powerful microscopes may be evolved, but the probability is that instead of solving the riddle of existence they will merely show that the problem is one that is as far beyond human solution as the infinite is beyond the finite.

Guelph Mercury.

The time has of a surety arrived when more stringent legislation is absolutely necessary to stop the sale or possession of weapons, which, when carried by a person of a short temper, are apt to be used without a moment's thought of the consequences. Reports are received almost every day of some person in a fit of anger, jealousy or insanity committing murder, which could have been stopped if the sale of the murderous weapons had been properly regulated.

The Belleville Ontario.

Milk in Toronto sells at nine cents a quart for bottled milk. The dairymen in the vicinity of Toronto get a little over four cents for the milk when delivered in Toronto. It would therefore seem that the middlemen in Toronto are reaping an unjust share of the profits. It scarcely looks reasonable that the man who takes the milk from the Union Station should receive more money than the farmer who produces the goods, but such is actually the case. Such facts as these have a whole lot to do with making Toronto the most expensive city to live in on the American continent, as many have claimed. Does any reader of The Ontario know what paying nine cents a quart for milk means? A fairly accurate calculation shows that if we had to buy butter at the same rate, a pound of butter would cost us ninety-seven cents, while a pound of cheese would be sold for forty cents.

Reducing the Coal Bill.

When adding fuel to a good bed of live coal in the furnace cover one side only; the next time put coal on the other side. In this way the heat from the live coal tends to make coke of the fresh fuel by consuming the gas and smoke. Less draft is needed, too, and less of the fuel goes to waste in gas and smoke, so that there is less gas and dirt in the cellar or furnace room and in the house by way of the registers. If large lumps of coal are used a good way is to scatter what is known as "slack" over them. The slack tends to hold the fire longer, and the lump coal will tend to prevent the slack from forming clinkers.

Antiquity of the Bee.

The bee has been man's companion and friend from the very dawn of historic time. As far back as we can go we find the busy bee working for man's delight. The oldest writings of the Hebrews, Greeks and Romans are full of references to honey and its interesting makers. The "honey of Hymettus" was noted for its delightful flavor, and from the bees that made it the most illustrious of the Greek writers and orators took some of their most telling similes and illustrations.

C.N.R. Not Cupid's Agency.

J. F. Southall, traveling immigration agent of the Canadian Northern, has addressed letters to Canadian papers denying the report that Thos. Howell, general immigration agent, who is now in England, had advertised for 5,000 unmarried women to come to Canada to become espoused to an equal number of bachelors in this country. It appears that Mr. Howell made some remark in a jocular way.

SPRING SKIN TROUBLES.

Pimples, Eruptions and "Spotty Complexions."

At this season, scores of people—girls and young women especially—find their faces disfigured by pimples, dark spots, eruptions, etc. The skin needs attention—needs renovating after the trying time it has passed through during the winter.

Just think what it has gone through! You have been out in rain and sleet and snow. You have been at one moment perspiring from skating, or some other exertion. Then you have stood to "cool off." You have spent hours of the day indoors at a temperature equal to summer heat. Then you have covered up your skin—except your face—and gone out into temperature away below zero! No wonder that with all these changes, the skin of the face and neck shows signs of needing attention.

Zam-Buk and Zap-Buk soap are the remedies. Smear Zam-Buk lightly over the spots, the eruptions, the shallow patches, at night and wash with Zam-Buk soap (only 25c per tablet) each day. Then notice how quickly your appearance improves. As the rich refined herbal essences sink deep into the tissue, the hard scurf-like patches are removed. Better color results. The cells of the skin become transparent. The blood beneath is able

DEBTOR HUNTING.

The Running Down of Delinquents Is a Flourishing Trade.

Ever has it been the case that the most exciting and most fascinating of all sports is man hunting, and the debt-collector often wishes there was less excitement. The matter is merely child's play when it is concerned with the inexperienced debtor, but there is no more wily creature than the hardened individual who incurs debts in the hope that he will be able to avoid payment.

There is a large number of men in this country who depend mainly upon chasing debtors for a living, taking the opportunity of buying the debt from a tradesman. The tradesman who has tried in vain to recover debts due to him, is glad at last to sell these debts as a mere fraction of their value. This is the professional debt buyer's opportunity and he gambles upon the chance that he will be able to recover a considerable amount of the money.

Unfortunately, while human nature remains as at present constituted, the law is bound to be too hard upon well-meaning debtors and too lenient upon scamps. As our law stands at present a man without immovable assets can set the law at defiance.

For instance, when a debt-collector resorts to the extreme step of issuing a warrant for the arrest of the culprit, he must serve it upon the man before sunset during the working days of the week, and he cannot force open the doors of a man's dwelling. It follows therefore, that after sunset

The Elusive Fly.

Any one who has tried with outstretched hand to catch a fly cannot fail to have noticed its wonderful alertness in escaping. "One reason for this," explains a naturalist, "is the fact that the fly was watching the movements of its would be captor out of all or most of its 8,000 eyes. Another reason for its rapid retreat is that, instead of seeing one hand coming toward it, the fly would have soon at least 7,500 hands all looking alike and all moving down upon it in the same direction. A third reason of the fly's nimbleness is its ability to vibrate its wings nearly 700 times in a second and to travel through the air at a rate of a mile in two and a half minutes or twenty-four miles an hour."

Parasol Ants.

It was once supposed that the so-called "parasol" ants, living in hot tropical countries, carried little leaves about their heads for the sake of protection from the sun. Later investigations have shown that the ants actually do carry leaves, suspended by the stem, which they hold in their jaws, and that columns of them thus furnished with leaves like an army with banners march in regular order, but that the leaves, instead of being intended to shelter the ants from the sunshine, are deposited around their nests to form a soil in which grows a kind of fungus they are fond of.

PASSING OF DAILS.

The Old Wind-Jammer Is Not Long for the High Seas.

The decrease in the number of British sailing ships continues from year to year. Losses at sea and sales to foreigners have removed a very large number of sailers from "Lloyds Register," and the number of ocean-going boats has during the past couple of years been dwindling at the rate of 25 per cent. per annum. There are now only about 250 British sailing vessels of over 1,000 tons burden afloat. The Norwegian fleet of large size sailers exceeds the British. The French have about 170 sailers of over 1,000 tons register, and the Germans over 150 of these craft including several vessels used exclusively as school ships for officers.

During the past six months alone about five per cent. of the ocean-going British sailing vessels have been lost by perils of the sea or broken up and a further 15 per cent. have been written off as sold to foreign owners. Less expense is incurred in running ships under the Norwegian or German flag than under the British flag, there are fewer men employed and at lower wages, and British owners finding that they were unable to compete have been throwing their property on the market and selling the vessels, for which they paid $50 and $75 per ton, at an enormous sacrifice.

Underwriters in Lloyd's several years ago complained that they were losing money over ocean sailing ships, and eventually re-insurance premiums on the vessels and their cargoes advanced to such an extent that British shipowners owning long distance craft found themselves compelled to advance freights or remain uninsured. Neither course was satisfactory, for if freights went up the steamships, making faster voyages, took the business, and the merchants were only too pleased to escape with the lower premiums. There are at the present time practically no long distance sailing ships under construction in British yards.

Another Man.

"Look here, old fellow, where is that $10 you borrowed from me last month?"

"What $10?"

"Why, didn't you come to me and say you must have $10? Didn't you say you were so worried you weren't yourself that night?"

"Oh, well, if I wasn't myself why in the deuce should I be expected to pay it?"

A Costly Lie.

"My wife found a poker chip in my pocket, and I told her it was a dyspepsia tablet."

"That was clever."

"Far from it! She swallowed the chip, and the doctor's bills cost me more than the jackpot."

An Expensive Habit.

"When you borrow trouble you'll find the rate of interest pretty high."

ing a warrant for the arrest of the culprit, he must serve it upon the man before sunset during the working days of the week, and he cannot force open the doors of a man's dwelling. It follows therefore, that after sunset and on Sundays the debtor can walk about and snap his fingers under the nose of the man who has a warrant in his pocket for the debtor's arrest.

Every debt-collector knows examples of "wanted" men who in the evening walk about the streets as if the place belonged to them; it is not unusual even for such a man to endeavor to get the best personal terms with his hunter. All that is necessary is that the debtor should take in a sufficient stock of commodities, so that during the day-time he may have every opening in the house barred.

Frequently it is the case that some of these slippery customers are not so well versed in the law as they imagine. Take the case of a man who had been chased by the debt-collectors for many months. Occasionally they had seen him in the streets during the day-time, but he had managed to escape by taking to his heels, or by the old trick of rushing into a public house by one door and out by another.

One day, however, the man was caught, and a warrant served upon him. He made a very plausible excuse of obtaining the money from a friend. The man with the warrant waited until he was tired outside the door of the house into which the debtor went, and then found that he had been tricked again.

This debtor turned out of his home next Sunday as usual, and coolly walked past an officer who held a warrant when, to his intense surprise, he was arrested immediately. The debtor, with all his scheming, was not aware of the fact that once having been arrested he could be re-arrested at any time, even on Sunday. He paid for his ignorance by going to prison.

In a large number of cases a coolly worded letter to the debtor will affect the desired purpose, bringing an early remittance; the debtor realizes that the matter is now no longer in the hands of a tradesman who has a business to look after, but is in the hands of a man who intends making him pay, even through the nose. Usually in such cases, the debtor sends a long-winded letter, explaining the delay in making payment, and expressing surprise that such steps have been taken. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the excuse is the same—a faulty memory.

A Cheerful Outlook.

Kaiser Wilhelm is firmly convinced that he will die by the hand of an assassin. This has been predicted to him several times, twice as a young man by Hungarian gypsies when he was visiting his friend the late crown prince of Austria at Galicia, and it is said that this conviction forms a constant topic of conversation between the emperor and his friends.—London Tit-Bits.

Facts About Motherhood

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at the time of child-birth, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when the strain is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, women will persist in going blindly to the trial. It isn't as though the experience came upon them unawares. They have ample time in which to prepare, but they, for the most part, trust to chance and pay the penalty.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy, and strong.

Any woman who would like special advice in regard to this matter is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. Her letter will be held in strict confidence.

Insured Against Bandits.

The bandits of Manchuria and Mongolia have adopted a new way of acquiring at least a portion of the goods of the traveler. These mounted highwaymen in bands not only constantly attack the peaceful native population, but even rob travelers in broad daylight.

As a provision against this danger an insurance bureau where one buys a banner at a cost of about one-fifth-hundredth of the value of the property to be insured is established there.

This banner carried by a traveler will save him from the bandits' attack, for, curiously enough, they themselves conduct this insurance business. But it has its limitations.

"We paid our premium at the insurance bureau," says a Japanese traveler, "secured a red banner, and our party then started from Harbin, using several sturdy ponies for ourselves and the carrying of our luggage. After traveling about ten miles we reached a small town called Takin."

"Several of our customers came to see us in the evening and warned us that there were many mounted bandits in the neighborhood. When we told them there was no cause for anxiety on their account because of the insurance they informed us that by it our safety was guaranteed only on the highways, but that the bandit bureau was not responsible for what might happen inside of any building."

THE MAN IN THE CAB.

His Responsibility Can Neither Be Shared Nor Shifted.

When you saw him last he was sitting quietly in his seat back of the big boiler watching the crowd hurry down the platform to business and friends—a strong, unromantic figure in oily overalls. Probably you did not give him a second glance, but a few moments since he had held your life and hundreds of other lives literally in his hand.

Engine driving makes automobile driving mere play. If you are able to buy or borrow enough money to buy an automobile you may have the joy of facing death wherever you may choose and the policeman is not watching, but you are mercifully prevented from letting many others share your fate. The engineer has no such limitations. He is at the mercy of mankind, nature and his time card, but a trainload of people is the stake for which he plays. Of himself he cannot think. Face to face with the inevitableness of the next moment, if disaster comes through another's carelessness he must be the first to suffer. If he himself errs there is no one to share the blame. He is the incarnation of responsibility that can neither be shared nor shifted.

You will find the man in the cab throughout our world. He stands face to face with responsibility, sometimes gaining honor or wealth, but always at the cost of being master of the lives of others. It is a lonesome job, this being the man in the cab. Lonesomeness is part of the cost of power. The higher you climb the less you can hope for companionship. The heavier and the more immediate the responsibility the less can a man delegate his tasks or escape the tragedies of his own mistakes. The private soldier can always share in victories, but the commanding officer alone bears the weight of defeat.

The average man seldom thinks of the load which power brings. The captain of industry, on whose foresight and energy, on even the incidents of whose life, the prosperity and livelihood of thousands of families depend; the political leader who must bear the brunt of defeat which others have caused; the employer who can share his success with many, but who must face bankruptcy alone—these are no more children of good fortune. Like the man in the cab, they stand face to face with responsibility, burdened with the fate of many, but expecting help from none.

The next time you look up from your novel to complain that your train is late remember the man in the cab. Trains do not run themselves. It is a human life that rules the steam that hurls you safely through space. And the next time you envy the man of power and position think of the loneliness of his responsibility, the friendlessness of his success and the risk he faces while you and those like you are at ease.

If leadership seems easy, just try being a leader!—World To-day.

The Result of a Drink.

Such a slight circumstance as a glass of wine changed the history of France for nearly twenty years. Louis Philippe, king of the French, had a son, the Duke of Orleans and heir to the throne, who always drank only a certain number of glasses of wine, because even one more made him tipsy. On a memorable morning he forgot to count the number of his glasses and took one more than usual. When entering his carriage he stumbled, frightening the horses and causing them to run. In attempting to leap from the carriage his head struck the pavement, and he soon died. That glass of wine overthrew the Orleans rule, confiscated their property of $100,000,000 and sending the whole family into exile.

Father Morriscy's Remedies

Now on Sale in Ontario

When Father Morriscy, the famous priest-physician of Bartibogue, N. B., died a year ago last spring, he left his prescriptions to the Sisters of the Hotel Dieu, at Chatham, to be used for the benefit of humanity and of the church.

Not being in position to make up and distribute the prescriptions themselves, the Sisters arranged with a number of gentlemen, who had been Father Morriscy's friends, to do it for them. These gentlemen working under the name of the "Father Morriscy Medicine Co., Limited," had by the first of the year placed the remedies in nearly every store in the Maritime Provinces.

So gladly were they received, and so satisfactory has been their record of cures, that the Sisters and the Company have decided to place them on sale throughout Canada.

Father Morriscy's "No. 7," for Rheumatism and the Kidneys—"No. 10," Cough Cure and Lung Tonic—"No. 11," Stomach Remedy—"No. 26," for Catarrh, and "Father Morriscy's Liniment"—can now be obtained from most dealers in this Province. If yours does not keep them write the Father Morriscy Medicine Co., Limited, Montreal, Que.

VARIETIES OF HEAT.

Curious Effects of Beams of Light Under Different Conditions.

To the ordinary layman heat is heat, with no variation save in intensity. Yet science says that several varieties of heat exist and starts in to prove it. What will heat one thing will not heat another, while some things are susceptible to nearly all kinds.

Take a glass lens and focus the light from an electric arc upon an air thermometer is made of glass and air and tells ordinary temperatures as well as any kind. It will be found, however, that this beam of light has no effect on it, does not raise it in the slightest. The explanation is that the glass lens stops all heat waves that affect glass, while the intervening air stops all waves that affect air, so when the beam gets to the thermometer it is powerless as far as heat that affects glass and air is concerned. Yet if you put your hand in the focus a blister will be burned in short order, or if the bulb of the thermometer is painted black this will get hot and send the index up.

Warren tells of an experiment by means of which a strong and very hot ray was sent through a cake of ice without melting the ice a particle. It was done by interposing a transparent tank of water between the lens and the ice, the water taking all the heat capable of affecting water or ice and becoming hot itself, while the ice remained undisturbed. Yet gunpowder may be exploded by means of the rays transmitted through ice.

Nearly all heat from the sun will pass through glass, but it has been found that from white or platinum the glass absorbs one-fourth of its total heat. The most astounding experiment was made with copper heated to whiteness. It was found that the glass through which it tried to go absorbed nineteen-twentieths, allowing only one-twentieth to go through.

As is well known, heat from the sun comes through glass with facility into a room and heats up objects in the room. The objects change this heat to dark rays, and it cannot get out again. If glass transmitted a majority of the heat waves from a hot stove we should most certainly have to have winter rooms without windows or else lose all our heat. Along the same lines is the method of the earth in retaining the heat of the sun through the night. The atmosphere allows almost all the sun's heat to pass through to the earth, but there

WHEEL COOKING SCHOOLS.

Germany's New Plan for Teaching Girls in the Country.

The government of the Duchy of Saxe-Meiningen has been for some time past experimenting with a plan for teaching girls in small country villages the art of cooking. At the present time there are three female teachers in the employ of the government, each one of whom has prescribed districts. The course in cooking in a village lasts six weeks and each teacher visits seven villages, thus keeping her employed forty-two weeks in the year, the remaining ten weeks being her vacation.

A teacher receives $37.84 for each course, or $261.80 per year. Each pupil pays $2.86 for the six weeks' course, being equal to 48 cents per week, and is allowed to eat what is cooked at the school. No school is opened in a village unless at least 12 pupils are guaranteed in advance, because less than that number would not warrant the expense of starting it.

One of these schools at Vellsdorf was held in a large room in a wing of the local inn, the school hours being from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Every article in the room was portable, capable of being easily transported to the next village with very little trouble or expense. In one corner of the room was a cooking stove, in which coal was burned, and at one side of the room was a large, wide bench, on which the vegetables, etc., were prepared, and above this bench hung the necessary cooking utensils.

At one end of the room was a large cupboard filled with china and necessities for the table, and at the other end of the room there was a long table at which the pupils were sitting. The teacher had just given them the list of dishes that they were to cook that day for dinner, and was questioning them as to the market price of the articles needed for them. The cost of each ingredient was reckoned, assuming that enough was to be made for a family of four. The dinner was to consist of soup, meat, rice and dessert, the cost of which was reckoned at 24 cents for four people, or six cents for each person.

Everything was taken into account when reckoning the cost, including salt, spices, etc., as well as the cost of the fuel used. The Saxe-Meiningen government supplies everything except the cups and plates, which the pupils like to bring themselves, because each pupil usually has her favorite china cup, saucer and plate at home. In most of the villages in Thuringia the only kind of vegetable known is cabbage, or, in another form, sauerkraut.

It is said that the German farmer will eat only what he has from his hood, and great difficulty is, therefore, experienced by the teachers of the school in inducing their pupils to partake of any dish that is cooked for the first time.

The cooking of the average housewife in a small village in Germany is so rudimentary that the latest attempt of the Government of the Duchy of Saxe-Meiningen to teach at least the rudiments of cooking to young country girls is considered worthy of commendation and support.

Eating Apples.

The wholesome art of eating apples is all but unknown among us. Now and then some quiet soul will choose his apple with the care that another man chooses his manipulated cigar and relish it with the tang of summer heats and windy days. But we buy apples as we buy baskets of coal—we buy them in the mass, caring only that they are of certain sizes and colors. Then we dump them into some waste corner or musty cellar, open to mice and to furnace heat and to currents of air, and when the skins have toughened into leather and the fragrance has given place to odor of ashes and of decay we cut them up into dumplings and pies and so work

Aviators, Please Note

Any aeronaut who can give a definite guarantee that his machine will not break down should find a good customer in a young man named Ebenstein.

Ebenstein has inherited a large fortune left him by his grandfather. Old Ebenstein, as a Hanoverian, fought against the Prussians in 1866, and his hatred of his enemies was so intense that in his will he made it a condition that his heir should never set foot on Prussian soil.

But young Ebenstein lives in Brunswick; and Prussia divides Brunswick into five parts, all of which it surrounds. As Ebenstein lives in one of the smallest parts, he is practically a prisoner to the end of his days. He can scarcely move without touching Prussia.

Only by aeroplane can he escape. But, supposing the aeroplane breaks down after a mile or two, and lands him in a Prussian field? In that case, the money would pass to a distant cousin.

So aeroplane owners who have a good machine for sale have a chance of making a great bargain.

Patent of Nobility In Pawn.

The Neue Freie Presse of Budapest recently published the following communication: "The original patent of nobility granted by Maria Theresa in 1741 to George Ritter von Frenzl is now in the possession of Dr. Jos. Lindenmayr, regimental surgeon at Presburg. The document was given to one of his ancestors as security for a loan. This announcement is made for the information of possibly existent descendants of Ritter von Frenzl."

That glass of wine overthrew the Orleans glass, confiscated their property of $100,000,000 and sending the whole family into exile.

A Short Sermon.

It is reported that a young man, being examined preparatory to joining the church, was asked, "Under whose preaching were you converted?"

"Under nobody's preaching," was the prompt reply. "I was converted under my mother's practicing."

Did any preacher ever utter so powerful a sermon as the young man embodied in those few words?

Galvani's Discovery.

It is to the wife of Prof. Galvani of Bologna that is due the credit of having discovered the electrical battery which bears his name. Some skinned frogs lay upon the table, and, noticing a convulsive movement in their limbs, she called her husband's attention to the strange fact, and he instituted a series of experiments, and in 1791 he laid the foundation of the galvanic battery.

Rubbing It In.

He was mumbling about tough steak and cold coffee and making himself generally disagreeable.

"Don't growl so over your breakfast, John," said his generally meek wife. "Nobody is going to take it away from you."

Severe Prescription.

Doctor—You have some sort of poison in your system.

Patient—Shouldn't wonder. What was in the stuff you gave me?

to have winter months without windows or else lose all our heat. Along the same lines is the method of the earth in retaining the heat of the sun through the night. The atmosphere allows almost all the sun's heat to pass through to the earth, but there the waves are changed and cannot get out.

A possibility of some interest is pointed out by Warren. It is that some planets that do not receive so much heat as the earth may have a different kind of atmosphere which keeps in more heat than does ours and therefore can have as great a temperature as ours. If we kept all the heat the sun gives us we could not live on this planet, for the amount would accumulate day by day until it became unbearable. The planet Mars is a notable instance. It receives only about one-thousandth the heat the earth receives, but observations go to show that its temperature is as high as ours.

He Had His Tea.

"Jack," said Mr. Brown to his only son and heir, "I've got a good mind to send you to bed without any tea."

Jack—Why, dad?

Dad—I hear that you have disobeyed your grandmother, who told you not to slide down the banister, and you continued to do so.

Jack—Grandma didn't tell me not to, dad. She only came to me and said, "I wouldn't slide down those banisters, my lad."

Dad—Well?

Jack—Well, dad, I shouldn't think she would, an old lady like her. Should you, dad?

Mr. Brown didn't pass an opinion, thinking it best to let things drop.—London Ideas.

Stories of "Old Q."

The "wickedness" of "Old Q." (the Duke of Queensberry) has passed into a proverb, but two tales of his other traits may be quoted from Mrs. Jerrold's "The Beaux and the Dandies." One is that he "paid a doctor to keep him well, deducting fees when he was ill, and thus when he died left his physician his creditor for $50,000, and the other that "there was a popular prejudice against drinking milk in London at this time because it was believed that the duke bathed each morning in milk, which was subsequently sold to consumers."

Contemporary Opinion of Beethoven.

When the First Trios and the First Symphony appeared the conservative critics declared that they were "the confused explosions of a talented young man's overweening conceit."

The Second Symphony was called a monster, a dragon wounded to death and unable to die, thrashing around with its tail in impotent rage! Later Von Weber declared of the sublime Seventh Symphony that "the extravagances of this genius have reached their ne plus ultra, and Beethoven is quite ripe for the madhouse!"—Dole in "Famous Composers."

Incompatibility.

The charwoman, being in need of extra work, had been recommended to a neighbor. She turned up a few days later with a grim look on her face.

"Can't work no more for Mrs. X."

"Why not?"

"She's not musical."

"Does that make any difference?"

"I was stagin' a 'im in the wash cellar when she called down the steps to me and said, 'The only music I want to hear is the sound of the peggy in the washbasin.' There's no tap about 'er."—Manchester Guardian.

Red Tape In Japan.

A European resident of Japan, who lives some distance from Tokio, was sent a tax bill for a farthing (one-quarter of a cent). Since it was a very inconvenient distance to the tax office, he paid no attention to the bill, but after a time he received a threatening notice from the authorities ordering him to pay it. Not being allowed to pay taxes by post, he was obliged to make a journey costing several hundred times the amount of the tax to pay the bill. This farthing tax was collected three times a year, and he attempted to get rid of the inconvenience by making other journeys by paying the tax for a year in one sum, but this the authorities would not permit.

ESCAPED THE HANGMAN.

Ben Jonson, For Manslaughter, Was Sentenced to Be Branded.

The present sessions house has been used for the work of the country for a hundred years and contains records and other historical documents which go back to the year 1549, when Edward VI. was king, and a representative of The London Globe was privileged to examine some of them. Perhaps the most interesting is the original indictment of Ben Jonson for manslaughter. The name, by the way, is spelled Johnson. Ben Jonson was arraigned at the Old Bailey in October, 1598, for the manslaughter of Gabriel Spencer in a duel at "Shordiche with a certain sword of iron and steel called a rapier of the price of 3s., which he then and there had in his right hand and held drawn, feloniously and wilfully struck the same Gabriel then and there with the aforesaid sword, giving to the same Gabriel Spencer in and upon the same Gabriel's right side a mortal wound of the depth of six inches and of the breadth of one inch, of which mortal wound the same Gabriel Spencer then and there died instantly."

The document is headed with a statement that the prisoner "confesses the indictment, asks for the book, reads like a clerk, is marked with the letter T and is delivered according to the form of the statute," etc. This in modern language means that the author of "Every Man In His Humor" claimed the privilege of the clergy, which was extended to laymen who could read, of escaping the hangman for a first offense on being branded on the left thumb with a T, which was commonly known as the Tyburn T. Ben Jonson, apparently by bribing the jailer, had the operation of branding performed with cold steel, as no marks of branding were found on his body at his death.

This remarkable document, which escaped the poet's biographers, was found among a number of fragmentary rolls. It had lost its dated wrapper, was wet and decayed and was far on the road to rotteness when it was rescued from its oblivion and submitted by the experts of the Middlesex County Council to a process of cleaning and restoring.

Mistake of a Blind Boa Constrictor.

A boa constrictor that was nearly blind was once found to be contentedly swallowing a blanket for dinner instead of a rabbit, which was also within reach, and it was only with great difficulty that it was forced to disgorge this singular article of food. A snake's tongue is therefore not an organ of taste, nor is it, as many think, a sting; it is more probably a delicate organ of touch.—Chambers' Journal.

THE CURSE OF THE NATION IS CONSTIPATION

"Fruit-a-tives" Alone Cures This Disease

A famous scientist states that Constipation, or non-action of the bowels, causes more deaths than all other diseases combined. Constipation inflames the Kidneys, ruins digestion, is the foundation of Rheumatism, poisons the blood, causes Headaches, Neuralgia, Nervousness and Insomnia.

Constipation is caused by a weak or sluggish liver. Bile, the only purgative of the body, is secreted by the liver, which in turn should pour out into the intestines sufficient bile to move the bowels. Unless the liver is active, there cannot be enough bile to move the bowels regularly, and Constipation is the result.

"Fruit-a-tives", the famous fruit medicine, will always cure Constipation because it acts directly on the liver—relieves the congestion—increases the quantity of bile—and strengthens the bowel muscles.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE LATE WILLIAM MILLIGAN OF SHEFFIELD.

There passed to his rest on Tuesday morning, April 4th, on one of the oldest settlers of the township of Sheffield, William Milligan, aged ninety-five years, eight months twenty-five days.

William Milligan came to Canada in 1841 from the County Tyrone, Ireland. He and his wife and son, James, settled in the township of Sheffield, where he resided till the time of his decease. There were eight of a family—four boys and four girls—James, William, Mary, Henry, John, Maria, Sarah Jane, Elizabeth. James, Wm. Mary, Elizabeth were called home by death. John and Maria are on the old homestead. Mrs. Shores resides with her husband and family in Camden, and Henry in the state of New York. Mr. Milligan was a life long member of the Presbyterian church, and a man that feared God, and was held in high esteem by his neighbors and was noted for his kindness and hospitality.

The evening before he and his wife and son left Ireland for Canada, the home of their adoption, many of his friends and neighbors gathered to say him a fond good-bye and God's blessings for a safe and prosperous journey.

One of the friends took down the good book and as he opened its sacred pages the spirit led him to select for the evening worship (as it was their custom), the 46th psalm: "God is our refuge and strength." The words of the psalm so impressed Mr. Milligan that he never forgot them. He took God to be his God, and found him through all the years that followed his refuge and strength. At the funeral service, held at St. Andrew's Church, Tamworth, Rev. Mr. Henry, his pastor, took the hymns that Mr. Milligan selected during his life: "Take Comfort Christians when our friends in Jesus, fall asleep," and "Asleep in Jesus, Blessed Sleep," also the 90th Psalm, "Lord Thou Hast Been Our Dwelling Place in Generations All." Rev. Mr. Henry preached from the 46th Psalm. Mr. Milligan's remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Camden, N. B.

THE CANADIAN GOVERNMENT ANNUITIES ACT.

The object of the Act is to promote habits of thrift, and to provide all persons, male or female, domiciled in Canada with a safe and sure plan of making provision for old age at the lowest possible cost. Deposit from time to time in any Money Order Office such sums as you can spare, for which purpose the Postmaster will supply you with a pass book: or you may, if you prefer, remit these amounts direct to the Annuities Department, in any manner that may best suit your convenience. (If by cheque or Money Order, this should be drawn to the order of the Receiver General.) Upon your deposits 4 per cent compound interest will be allowed, and at the age of 55 (which is the earliest age at which an Annuity can begin) or at any later age desired, and of course the longer deferred the larger will be your income, such Annuity as the total amount then at your credit will purchase will be paid to you in quarterly installments so long as you live. A definite amount of Annuity may be secured if specific sums are regularly paid. Should you die before the Annuity is due, all payments made will be returned to your legal representatives with 3 per cent compound interest; though the same payments will secure for you a larger Annuity if you do not wish to provide for this return.

If you have an amount at your credit in the Post Office Savings Bank, you may have this amount, or such portion of it as you may desire, transferred to the Annuities Department for, or on account of, the purchase of an Annuity.

The minimum Annuity which may be purchased is $50, and the maximum $600. The earliest age at which the purchase may be begun is 5, but it may begin at any age thereafter. To each purchaser a contract or policy is issued, and a provident feature of the system is that there are no penalties or forfeitures. If payments should for any reason cease they may be renewed at any time; and if arrears are not made up the only effect will be that a smaller Annuity will be secured.

A person over the age of 55 may buy an Immediate Annuity; and a Last Survivor Annuity, Immediate or Deferred, may be purchased by any two persons by a single payment.

By paying a little higher rate, all Annuities may be guaranteed for a number of years certain.

About 1,800 persons have availed themselves of the Act, and over $890,000 have been paid into the fund. Every class of the community may be said to be purchasing. Twelve lecturers or agents are employed to represent the features of the System to the public from the platform and otherwise; and an office staff of eighteen is already necessary to handle the work. You bear no share of this cost, but every cent you pay in is placed at your credit for the purchase of your Annuity.

If you desire any further information on the subject this will be supplied you by the Superintendent of Canadian Government Annuities, Ottawa, to whom all letters go free of postage. Literature may be obtained at the Post Office.

The Good of Laughter.

Encourage your child to be merry and to laugh aloud. A good, hearty laugh expands the chest and makes the blood bound along—not a little sniggering laugh, but one that will sound right through the house. It will not only do your child good, but will be a benefit to all who hear and be a means of driving the "blues" away from a dwelling. Merriment is very catching and spreads in a remarkable manner, few being able to resist the contagion.

None More Honest.

The most honest folks it is possible to imagine as existing on this mundane sphere inhabit the Raviss canton of Ticino. The very oldest men and women living in the Ticinese villages do not remember any case of thieving, however petty, within a lifetime. Any family that produced a thief would not be tolerated in these Arcadian communities for a week.

Lost objects when found must never be taken away; they must be left where they were dropped or placed in a conspicuous position so that the rightful owner can find his property more easily. The case is cited of a tourist who lost her purse on an excursion in the Cal Capriasea. The purse contained gold coin and a jeweled watch. Upon returning from her trip she found the purse with contents intact on a little heap of leaves, so placed that it could not fail to attract her attention.

The Scandinavians, too, have a great reputation for common honesty. In lonely parts of Sweden and Norway where medicines are not easily procurable chests containing drugs, ointments, bandages and the like are fixed on trees. No one ever thinks of using these articles without leaving money in payment for them in the cash box attached to the medicine chest. Often the money is not collected for weeks, but it is never touched.

Independent and Proud of It.

It is usually supposed that Monaco is the smallest independent state in Europe, but as a matter of fact there are three states that are still smaller. It is also a matter of common belief that France, Switzerland and Portugal are the only republics in Europe, but there are two others, the republics of Andorra and San Marino. These two republics and the principality of Liechtenstein are all of them smaller than Monaco, and they all claim to be autonomous and independent.

Liechtenstein is crowded away between Austria and Switzerland, and it used to have a tiny army of its own, but this was abolished for fear someone might want to fight with it. Austria keeps a benevolent eye upon Liechtenstein, while France performs a similar paternal function toward Andorra, which is in the eastern Pyrenees, but San Marino looks after her own territory, 33 square miles in extent, without foreign aid.

The people of San Marino are as proud of their glorious republic and of its enlightened institutions as republicans anywhere else. San Marino has an army of 1,000 men, and these have been found amply sufficient to keep at bay the predatory hordes of military Europe.

En Electric Pencil.

An electrically-lighted pencil for persons who sometimes have to write in the dark is one of the latest novelties in writing implements. The holder of the lead is provided with a source of electric supply and a tiny bulb, which throws a circle of light on the paper around the point. The pencil is adapted for the use of physicians, newspaper men, and for workers in other branches of industry who find it at times necessary to make notes while on the street at night or in darkened rooms.

Suitable.

Mr. Milligan's remains were laid to rest at Knox Church, Camden East, in the family plot there, on Friday morning, April 21st.

Gross Misrepresentation.

"Several of my friends have told me," roared the caller, a partly, naively individual with a fiery nose, "that your paper the other day spoke of me as 'the monumental demagogue of the age!'"

"Whoever told you that," vociferated the editor, quivering with indignation, "uttered an infamous falsehood. We spoke of you as the monumental demagogue of the ages!"

The Finishing Touches.

"The famous epitaph placed on the monument over her husband's grave by a woman up in Maine, 'Rest in peace until I join you,' has almost a duplicate in a sign on the door of a doctor's office in a downtown office building," says George A. Schneider. "This sign reads, 'Do not absolutely abandon hope until you have seen me!'"

Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay in bed with indigestion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the NEW METHOD TREATMENT and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so."

NEW STRENGTH IN THE SPRING

Nature Needs Aid in Making New, Health Giving Blood

In the spring the system needs toning up. To be healthy and strong you must have new blood, just as the trees must have new sap to renew their vitality. Nature demands it, and without this new blood you will feel weak and languid—you may have twinges of rheumatism or the sharp stabbing pains of neuralgia. Often there are disfiguring pimples or eruptions on the skin. In other cases there is merely a feeling of tiredness and a variable appetite. Any of these are signs that the blood is out of order—that the indoor life of winter has lessened your vitality. What is needed to put you right is a tonic, and in all the world of medicine there is no tonic can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills actually make new, rich, red blood—your greatest need in the spring. This new blood drives out disease, clears the skin and makes weak, easily tired men, women and children, bright, active and strong. You can prove this by your neighbors, for there is not a nook or corner in this great land where some weak, ailing man or woman has not been made well and strong by this great medicine. Mr. H. Wilson, Stonewall, Man., says: "Some years ago I was run down, languid and depressed and felt as though I was only fittid for the scrap heap. A friend who had great faith in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills gave me a box. Before they were all used I felt some better, and thus encouraged, got a further supply, and it was not many weeks until I was again enjoying my former good health. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a boon to every weak person."

THE SLEEPING SICKNESS.

An Area of 100,000 Square Miles Has Been Affected.

In his speech at the Guildhall when acknowledging the welcome given by the city of London on his return from South Africa, the Duke of Connaught spoke in enthusiastic terms of the glories of Rhodesia.

"Rhodesia," he said, "is a wonderful and healthy country, the home in time to come of numberless sons and daughters of the race, rich in beauty and resources, and, even in these days of its childhood, a credit to those who are responsible for its nurture and upbringing. The Duke was in Rhodesia during November, visiting Victoria Falls on the 14th of the month. Unhappily, a cloud shortly afterwards developed.

"Sleeping sickness," the dreaded scourge of tropical Africa, has been spreading, and is now ravaging North-eastern Rhodesia, just north of the territory which his Royal Highness visited. On the 15th December Judge L. P. Beaufort, the Acting Administrator, gazetted an area of over 100,000 square

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE; OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

CHAPTER XII.—(Cont'd)

Dinner progressed very well, notwithstanding that the little hostess was rather quiet and somewhat engrossed in her own thoughts. The Hon. Maude was seated next to Mr. Crawshaw, and improved her opportunities in a manner worthy of her mother's daughter.

Mrs. Fairfax sat beside Lord Merefield and yawned audibly, but every now and then her face brightened as the clock chimed the quarters, and she remembered that Darnley would be with them directly.

Dorothy, too, began to awaken as the hour of nine approached.

"Derry should be here by this time; but then Derry was not like any one else; perhaps, for aught they knew, he might have come in quietly, without saying a word, and was now sitting comfortably in his own room."

Dorothy said this to herself, half pettishly, little thinking how near the truth she had guessed, for Derrick Darnley was at that very moment passing outside—the dining-room window, from when, carefully hidden himself by the shrubs and terrace, he had a good view into the room.

He laughed softly to himself as he quickly scanned them all, but his laugh soon died away.

"Old Williams at the lodge must be right, and she is ill," he thought to himself; "my poor darling. I must find out and satisfy myself; perhaps she will grow better when I am near."

He smiled tenderly to himself as he went very noiselessly into the hall, and fortunately met Baines, who at that moment was coming downstairs.

"Miss Dorothy is anxious about Miss Hamilton; is she in her room, Baines?" he asked, careful not to arouse any curiosity by inquiring for her on his own account.

"Lor', no, sir; Miss Nancy went downstairs hours ago. I've just bin in her room, sir, and I know she ain't there. I see her go into the garden, but I thought she was at dinner now, sir."

Mr. Darnley muttered his thanks, and, waiting until Baines had disappeared, then strode into the garden, and turned off resolutely in the direction of the lower lake.

"She will be there—there, where our love-dream was born—my darling!—my darling!—my eyes hunger to see your face again!"

The soft, tender locket crept over his features, his heart was thrilling and beating with his love; all nature seemed to harmonize with his feelings; there was music in the soft rush of the night air, the burr of the insect world seeking its rest; there was balm and powerful fascination in the fragrance wafted to him by the nodding flowers; it was the very place, the very night, for love's withery. And there, just

"I—I do not understand," he said, vaguely, then, seizing her by the two arms, "Speak!—speak!" he cried, "do not torment me; you are not the same Nancy I left; something has changed you, I do not know what; tell me, am I wrong?"

Her breath was coming short and fast, like that of a person in acute pain, yet she knew she must not fail now; she had to act, and it was not a moment to deliberate, or her strength would go, and she would have told all and betrayed her uncle, her guardian, her relative, her friend.

She dared not lift her eyes to his face as she answered, curtly:

"You—you are not wrong."
"You are changed," he repeated it over and over again, his gaze burning her palid face. "Nancy, for God's sake, don't trifle with me, tell me the worst! You—you don't love me! it was a mistake?"

She paused, his fingers were clenching her fair young arms, but she did not heed the pain. What was it to the agony that lived in her heart

"It was a mistake," she said, deliberately, in a dry, choked voice.

His breath came in a panting sob from his lips.

"You do not love me!" he cried, brokenly. "You do not love me!"

She made no answer. She checked the moan that rose from her tortured heart. She could not bear much more.

"You do not love me!—you, my darling!—my promised wife!"

She raised her eyes to his; the moon's pale light shone placidly down on them.

"I can never be your wife."

He bent forward to look at her, but did not release his hold.

"Go on," he muttered, hoarsely; "go on, there is more to know and I am not good at waiting."

Nancy bent her head as a flower droops under the hot heat of the sun.

"I—I have been very wrong. I—deceived you. I was not—not free to listen to you."

"Not free?" The man repeated the words three times, then he bent nearer to her. "His name? Give me his name, I say!" he asked in a hoarse whisper.

She paused only an instant.

Then two faint words passed her lips:

"Thomas Crawshaw!"

Derrick Darnley gripped her till he forced a cry of pain from her; then, with a short, hard laugh, he flung her from him and stood alone.

"You hypocrite! God forgive you, you have done an awful thing, for you have ruined my life!"

He stood silent for a moment, then he strode forward and drew up her trembling form from the ground, where she had fallen when she staggered back.

He clasped her in his arms, and

CURED THE WIFE AND HUSBAND TOO

GREAT WORK DONE BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS IN ONE QUEBEC FAMILY.

Thomas Lauriault had Kidney Disease and his wife Bright's Disease, and Dodd's Kidney Pills made them both well.

Lac Cayamont, Que., April 10 (Special)—There is a world interest in the simple story of Madame Thomas Lauriault of this place. In her own words, it is as follows:

"Dodd's Kidney Pills cured my husband of Kidney Disease and myself of Bright's Disease. We recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to all who suffer from Kidney or Bright's Disease."

This is a splendid example of the grand work Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing among the plain people of Canada. Kidney Disease is the commonest of all ailments among those who have to work hard, because the kidneys are the first part of the body to feel the wear and tear of heavy work.

When the kidneys go wrong the blood goes wrong, and the whole body goes wrong. Rheumatism, Dropsy, Diabetes and Bright's Disease are the usual results. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure these by simply curing the kidneys.

angels, etc., etc." Mrs. Darnley said, hurriedly: "here is Derry at last! He must have walked from the station."

Dorothy jumped up at once, all annoyance gone.

"Here you are," she cried, extending both her hands in greeting. "You naughty man you! We have been imagining you lost or drowned, or attacked by brigands."

"While all the time it was only a common, everyday headache that made such a furious onslaught on me."

The man spoke languidly. His hands felt hot and feverish to Dorothy's touch; his face was strangely haggard in the moonlight.

She looked at him anxiously.

"I hope you are not going to be ill, too, Derry."

He passed his hand over his aching eyes.

"Why? Have you other invalids, Dorothy?"

"Nancy has been very ill all day. I have been quite alarmed about her. But come in and have some food; you must be hungry and tired. Whatever induced you to walk such a hot night as this?"

"A whim—a mere whim, pretty cousin."

The man let his hand linger in Dorothy's. Her simple, unaffected delight at seeing him vaguely soothed and pleased, even while it pained him. There was such a difference in this greeting from the one that he had just experienced under the trees by the lake edge.

"Don't you see Aunt Anne?" whispered Dorothy.

Derrick Darnley had seen his mother plainly enough, but he shrank from speaking to her then. He felt that her keen, cold eyes would pierce into his heart, and read the

On the 15th December Judge L. P. Beaufort, the Acting Administrator, gazetted an area of over 100,000 square miles as a "sleeping sickness area." This proscribed territory just stops short of Rhodesia, the principal scene of the Chartered Company's enterprise and activity. The disquieting feature of the situation is, however, that the scourge seems to be rolling down from north to south. White men as well as natives fall prey. Flies are supposed to carry disease.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS CURE CONSTIPATION

Few other troubles afflict the little ones as does constipation. Every change of diet seems to bring this trouble on and baby suffers from headaches, fever, disturbed sleep and often vomiting. No baby who suffers from constipation can thrive well. Constipated babies are cross all the time and give mothers constant worry. The one sure relief for baby constipation is Baby's Own Tablets—they never fail to cure this trouble and can be given to the little one with absolute safety. Concerning them Mrs. W. S. McKenzie, Prairie Grange, Alta., writes: "I used Baby's Own Tablets for my baby who was constipated from birth and they rapidly helped her and left her bowels in a natural condition." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GRANDMOTHER OF MONARCHS

Many Royal Families Descended From Queen Victoria.

It is curious to think how many lines are and will be occupied by the descendants of the late Queen Victoria. In Prussia we have her eldest grandson, Kaiser Wilhelm; in Norway we have her granddaughter, Queen Maud; says the Gentlewoman.

In Sweden the Crown Princess is a granddaughter of the late Queen, and other grandchildren are the Grand Duke of Hesse, the Crown Princess of Greece, the Empress of Russia, the Crown Princess of Roumania, the Queen of Spain, the hereditary Princess of Saxe-Meiningen.

Among the great grandchildren of the late Queen are the German Crown Prince, the Czarowitz, the Prince of the Asturias, Prince George of Greece, the eldest son of the Crown Prince of that ilk, Prince Carol of Roumania, the Crown Prince of Norway and Prince Gustav of Sweden, no less than seven kings and two of them are heirs to empires. In very short time there will be no royal family in Europe that is not descended from Queen Victoria.

A girl always wants to marry a certain man—but nine times out of a possible ten she ties up with one who is more or less uncertain.

And there, just before, lay the corner which he knew by intuition sheltered the woman whose heaven-blue eyes made the world his world, whose sweet lips were his own, whose love surrounded him with peace, happiness and delight, such as rarely comes to man.

The pale summer moon had just broken through the dusk as Derrick Darnley reached the well-remembered spot by the lower lake.

His quick, eager eye had caught the gleam of a white gown through the trees, and his heart beat quicker in triumph and glad array.

He saw the slender figure but dimly, for the light was dying fast, and her silent attitude, born of suppressed agony, did not strike on him as it would have done at another time. He had walked fleetly—he had almost run—now he paused.

She had not moved; she had not turned; perhaps she had not heard, he crept so softly.

"Nancy." He called it gently, but she started back, started like a frightened deer that saw its doom approach and no aid near.

"My darling! my dearest heart, did I frighten you?"—he was beside her in an instant, and had clasped her in his arms. "Nancy, it has seemed a century since I left you; has it been long to you, sweet? Ah! I need not ask—I need not ask," he laughed joyously, and his hold tightened on her trembling form. "For you have faded and drooped away from me; you have been ill, my darling—ill—what ill dare come to you, my own, my sweet?"

Ah! if he could but have guessed—if he could only have known!

"They do not know I am here; I stole off at once to find you; am I not clever, eh, little one?" He stopped suddenly. "Kiss me," he whispered, tenderly, passionately: "kiss me, dearest, and welcome me back again."

With a sobbing cry she drew abruptly from him, just as his lips touched hers.

"No, no," she muttered, hoarsely, "no, you must not."

The words died away in a moan as she covered her face in her hands.

Darnley stood rooted to the spot.

"What is it?" he asked, hurriedly. "Have I really frightened you?—forgive me, darling, I forgot you had been ill. I am a brute; come to me again, Nancy, and I will soothe you, dearest."

She made no sign, only stood with her face covered up.

A sudden cold pain struck at his heart.

"Nancy!—Nancy!" he cried, huskily, "what is it, what has happened; tell me quickly, what has come to you, dear one?"

She put her hand as if to ward off a blow.

"I am your—dear one—no longer!"

Each word was uttered sharply, keenly; then rang on his ear with exquisite and horrible pain, so curt and hard did they sound. He passed one hand over his brow.

—fing her from him and stood alone. You hypocrite! God forgive you, you have done an awful thing, for you have ruined my life!"

He stood silent for a moment, then he strode forward and drew up her trembling form from the ground, where she had fallen when she staggered back.

He clasped her in his arms, and strained her to his heart; then, bending his head, kissed her passionately—fiercely.

"Oh! sweet, false, cruel lips!" he cried, his voice hoarse and altered. "You may smile on happily, for you have spoken my doom!"

Once more he kissed her, then, releasing her suddenly, he turned aside and strode away.

The girl's form faltered, her two hands went out feebly towards him.

"Derry—Derry, my love!" she moaned, but as the sound of his dying footsteps reached her ear she fell prone to the earth, lost for a time to remembrance in merciful oblivion.

CHAPTER XIII.

"It is very odd," Dorothy Leicester said to herself.

Dinner was over, and every one was scattered about the grounds and lawn. She could just catch a glimpse of her father lying back serenely asleep in his cosy chair. Mrs. Fairfax was chatting to Lady Burton, deep in some fresh and delightful bit of scandal. Over to her right strolled Mr. Crawshaw with Maud Chester in persistent attendance, while her sister endeavored, without much success, however, to follow her example with Lord Merfield, who was all eager to join his dainty cousin's side, and was, therefore, not a very interested listener to the Hon. Ella's loud-declared accounts of her own and her sister's prowess with the tennis bat.

Dorothy was alone; she might have joined her aunt, Mrs. Darnley, who was sweeping to and fro majestically in her long black satin robe, her diamonds glistening in the moonlight, and an air of undisguised pleasure sitting on her handsome face, but Dorothy infinitely preferred to be alone.

"It is very odd," she said again.

She was thinking about Darnley and his non-appearance.

And where was Nancy—what could be keeping her all this time—it was so unlike Nancy to hide herself in this way?

Dorothy bit her pretty lip, and tapped her foot impatiently on the ground.

Her aunt sailed up to her at this moment.

"Something has detained Derrick, I suppose," she observed, slowly. "It is too late for him to come now."

Her cold eyes were fixed on a form emerging in the distance as she spoke—a form which moved slowly and languidly as that of a man weakened by illness and suffering, and at the sight a tinge of color crept into her cheeks.

"They have met—we have won!" was the quick thought in her mind—a thought full of triumphant delight, ignorant of either a woman's pity or a mother's sympathetic love.

She put her long, slender hand on Dorothy's shoulder.

"I think we must reconcile ourselves to the fact that he will not come to-night," she said; and then she gave a start of surprise. It was marvellously done, and deceived Dorothy immediately. "Talk of the one that he had just experienced under the trees by the lake edge. "Don't you see Aunt Anne?" whispered Dorothy.

Derrick Darnley had seen his mother plainly enough, but he shrank from speaking to her then. He felt that her keen, cold eyes would pierce into his heart, and read the sorrow written there. Besides, he had a grievance against her—a grievance that was augmented by strange doubt.

(To be continued.)

"Oh, Johnnie, Johnnie," said his aunt, reproachfully, "why is it you never remember to say 'Thank you'?" "I expect it's 'cause I don't get things given to me often enough for practice," answered the young diplomat, hopefully eyeing a box of chocolates.

WEIGHING PRECIOUS STONES.

A Change in the System Has Been Officially Declared.

An important change was made in the system of weighing precious stones by the agreement of the European jewellers and lapidists which is now in effect. France, Switzerland, Norway, Roumania, Bulgaria and Spain entered into the agreement to establish a metrical karat which would fit into the metrical system, now so generally used abroad. The old karat of 8.167 grains troy weighed 205.3 milligrammes, while the new karat which weigh an even 200 milligrammes, or 3.086 grains troy, according to the old system. The change is being considered in every country where precious stones are articles of commerce, and various European States in addition to those mentioned above which have already acknowledged the reform are about to adopt the metrical karat.

Of course, if any of the larger and wealthier nations—England, for instance—were to object to any alteration the confusion would tend to hamper trade, but the change is more than welcome on the continent, where the metrical has been in use for so many years that the old arbitrary weights are almost forgotten, and all measurements have been simplified into a decimal system.

"WHY BE SO THIN?"

Thinness is Embarrassing, Unhealthy and Not Natural—Formula Now Used Which Adds From One to Three Pounds a Week.

Everyone ought to have some extra flesh on the bony structure of the body, both for the sake of health and self-protection.

Most thin people are sensitive to the harsh, unfeeling criticisms which are constantly being hurled at them by the more fortunate well-girded persons.

Everyone pities a thin, bony horse, but horses don't know it while thin people are both pitied and ridiculed. It ought not to be so, but it is.

A well-rounded figure, be it man or woman, excites admiration; not only for the figure but for the bright eyes, pink cheeks, red lips, and vigorous carriage which accompany a well-nourished body.

Strength, health, beauty and sound flesh abound, if the blood and nerves get enough nourishment out of the food eaten.

This prescription aids nature; helps absorption, digestion and assimilation; helps distribute the blood and nerve elements which make sound flesh. Get the ingredients and make it at home, and see how very fast you gain in weight.

In a half pint bottle obtain three ounces of essence of pepsin, three ounces syrup of rhubarb. Then add one ounce compound essence cardiol, shake and let stand two hours, then add one ounce tincture cadomene compound, (not cadomom). ## HOW TO SAVE MONEY.

A Pointer to Housekeepers.
Look at the financial side of Zam-Buk's use. A cut sustained in the home, the store, or the workshop, results, say, in festering or blood-poisoning. You have to lay off a day or two. What does that mean when pay day comes round? Zam-Buk insures you against that loss! A little Zam-Buk applied to such an injury prevents all danger of blood-poisoning, takes out the smarting and heals.

Heads of families know how costly doctoring is. Be wise and act on the preventive line. A box of Zam-Buk in the home is so all-round useful. The baby's rashes, the older children's cuts and bruises, the inevitable burn, cut, or scald—for all these, as well as for more serious ailments, such as piles, ulcers, eczema, ringworm, etc., Zam-Buk is without a rival.

Dangers of Shaving.—You get a cut at the barber's shop. A little Zam-Buk smeared on the wound prevents all danger. If any ailment has been contracted, Zam-Buk cures.

Zam-Buk Soap is as good as the balm, but in a different way. Washed in Zam-Buk Soap the skin is disinfected and disease germs lying upon it are killed. Mothers will find it unequalled for baby's bath.

Zam-Buk Balm and Zam-Buk Soap are sold by all druggists and stores at 50c. for the balm and 25c. tablet for the soap.

A certain father who is fond of putting his boys through natural history examinations is often surprised by their mental ability. He asked them to tell him "what animal is satisfied with the least nourishment." "The moth," one of them shouted confidently. "It eats nothing but holes."

"I asked the young woman in front of me to remove her big hat, so that I could see the stage." "Did she do it?" "No; she said if she held her hat in her lap, she couldn't see the stage herself."

A Japanese doctor never dreams of asking a poor patient for a fee. There is a proverb among the medical fraternity of Japan, "When the twin enemy poverty and disease invade a home, then he who takes caught from that home, even if it be given him, is a robber."

"Often," remarked a recent lecturer on "Life in Japan," "a doctor will not only give his time and medicine free to the sufferer, but he will also give him money to tide over his dire necessities. Every physician is his own dispenser, and there are very few apothecaries' shops in the empire."

"Yes," sighed gentle little Mrs. Wildur, "I do wish Mrs. Nesbitt wasn't quite such a masterful woman about borrowing. I do need my irons so much."

"Won't she send 'em back?" asked the sympathetic caller.

"No, she won't. What was it she said when you went for 'em to-day, Marielda?"

"I spoke just as easy to her, and said, 'Good morning, Mis' Nesbitt. Ma says could she have her irons a little while? She's making a dress, and needs 'em to press.' And she answered me just as short, and said:

"'No, she can't! And you tell your ma that she knows perfectly well that pressing a dress, which I doubt if she's making one at all, isn't half as important as doing a family washing and ironing, and not to send me any more such foolish messages, either.'"

An English specialist on diet, Dr. Talbot McCarty, is said by a London newspaper to have found, to his own satisfaction at least, that men and women who eat much meat are jovial and mirth-loving, whereas vegetarians are sober and serious. He is quoted, also, as expressing the opinion that meat eaters are more courageous, an assertion which has been made often by the opponents of vegetarianism.

If it were an indisputable fact that meat promotes geniality and a love of humor, the most confirmed vegetarian might be persuaded to change his diet, for nothing is more valued or valuable in the modern world than laughter. But is it a fact? Surely the negro, the most mirth-loving of human beings, has been largely a vegetarian, though perhaps more from necessity than choice. The ancient Greeks were as witty a people as ever lived, but they ate little of flesh food. No more did the Italians or the people of southern France in the days of the troubadours. The love of fun and the wit of the Irish peasantry would seem to have been derived more from potatoes than from beef. As regards courage, the rice-eating Japanese surely showed enough of that in their war with the Russians.

In all such questions there are subtle influences of heredity, climate and physical conditions to be considered. Physically man is indeed what he eats, but the relations between his physical and mental natures—not to consider the moral—are not yet satisfactorily analyzed. Perhaps they never can be satisfactorily analyzed. Vegetarianism appears to be best for some and a meat diet for others. Naturally the individual who thrives on either believes that others should do as he does, and the food faddist is as much in need of a spirit of tolerance as the religious bigot.

England will do almost anything for social amelioration. Money is always needed for hospitals and charities. In default of better means, duchesses throw open their palaces at a guinea a ticket, that lesser people may gape and stare. The newest invention to promote and staring in aid of charity is an exhibit of the tiaras that are to be worn by peeresses at the approaching coronation. It is even intimated that this display may be supplemented by another—that of tiaras possessed by untitled English women and Americans.

Such an exhibition might bring in a few hundred pounds for charity; but the pointed emphasis it would lay on contrasting social conditions might bring more loss than gain. It

THE SIN OF SENSITIVENESS

The Only Remedy is the Persistent Effort Toward Disinterestedness

"Blessed are the poor in spirit."—Jesus.

If we examine sensitiveness under the microscope we shall find it to be no more nor less than a variety of egotism. The sensitive nature is simply one that is too much occupied with self. That way madness lies, ever.

I suppose no more exquisite torture has been devised by the evil one, at least in this world, than the endowing of a nightly organized, keenly perceptive person with a too large self-consciousness.

Of all the unit and tortuous places in this world the human heart is darkest and farthest past finding out; and the heart of an intelligent, cultured egotist with delicately strung feeling worst of all.

We approach peace only as we leave ourselves, as the center of things, and come to regard the world of humanity about us as a vast solar system, of which ourself is but a tiny planet at the rim. No self-forgetful person is ever sensitive. No self-forgetful person is habitually unhappy.

This sin of sensitiveness—and we ought to face it as

A DISTINCT SIN, a thing never to be boasted, always to be ashamed of—takes many forms. Some of them are of that most dangerous kind, the kind that resemble virtues.

For instance self-examination. There is a sort of luxury in probing one's own heart and handling our faults, like the pleasure of pressing upon a sore tooth.

Conscience may descend to a species of moral indigestion. Copy-book philosophy and teachers of moral platitudes commend this with our bodies, so with our spirits, the self-scrutiny. But as a rule it is vicious. As healthiest are those that are the least tampered with and worried over. The noblest soul is the one that is unconscious either of nobility or ignobility. The righteousness that knows itself and the sin that knows itself are akin—both bad.

Another and common form of this protean soul disease is self-deprecation. Wordsworth hits it off:

There is a luxury in self-dispraise;
And inward self-disparagement of fords
To meditative spleen a grateful feast.

I wonder if the housewife knows how uncomfortable she makes the guest feel when she precludes her dinner with apologies! And does the young lady know what an egotistical, conceited minx she seems to all simple and normal souls when she will not begin to play the piano or to sing until she has rehearsed her limitations?

And there be those women who are forever slandering their own appearance, and men forever decrying their own ability.

THIS IS NOT HUMILITY.

The one blazing beauty of humility, genuine, is that it forgets itself, that the one being it will neither blame nor praise is self.

And worst of all phases of sensitiveness, perhaps, is self-pity. Worst, because of it is born a deal of plain wickedness. The man who is sorry for himself is not far from smashing law and conscience for his own dear sake! Of all slops into which a manly man or a womanly woman ought not to fall the maudlin kindness for one's own poor soul is the most disgusting.

I am sure if we stop to reflect that the whole troop of degenerates, the murderers and thieves, and sneaks and unclean, are uniformly sorry for themselves, we should hesitate about allowing ourselves to drift into such company.

Sensitiveness, and all egotisms, are not forms of self-respect; they are the opposite of self-respect. They are self-defiling, self-condemning, self-destroying.

The only religious, sensible thing to do with this precious ME is to forget him.

DR. FRANK CRANE.

A FIRM THAT DIDN'T FAIL

The grey-haired man stood for a few minutes in his doorway, glancing to left and right along the quiet street. It seemed that none of the few passers-by paid any attention either to him or to his little shop. At last, with shoulders bent, he stepped forward to the kerb, and, facing round, looked up slowly towards the lettering above the window.

"Chislett & Son!" he muttered. There was a trace of bitterness in his voice.

Dusk had fallen, and it was almost time to turn down the lights.

"No stuck-up pride about her, anyway," affirmed the draper heartily, as he disappeared.

Later that evening, John Chislett sat motionless in his chair by the fireplace, and his thoughts returned to his son. It had seemed very lonely there in the parlor when his wife had died. For the past eighteen months his solitary life had become almost unbearable. It had been selfish to try to keep the boy with him. He admitted that now. Yet there had surely been some excuse.

"I told him it was his duty to stay," he murmured. "I was selfish—unjust!"

At the last moment, when his son's decision was obviously made, in desperation he had assumed anger, and spoken harsh words.

"But I wanted to keep him somehow! I didn't want to be left alone. I was in the wrong. I must try to look on the bright side. Things may come all right."

She held out her hand to him, and, after an astonishing pause, John Chislett took it.

"Think of me as a friend, then," she smiled.

She began to come each week-day now, and John Chislett looked forward eagerly to her visits, even though matters were going from bad to worse, and at last he fell a prey to absolute despair. Bankruptcy, that was what it meant. And after that, what would become of him?

Then an apathy overcame him. During one whole day he vowed that he would cease to struggle and to hope.

It was in the morning that the letter came. John Chislett opened it with a sigh. A cheque fell from the envelope. Dazedly he read the accompanying note.

"In accordance with the instructions of a relative of yours, who desires to remain anonymous, we have pleasure in enclosing cheque for $500 to your order. Kindly sign and return the form of receipt herewith."

The signature was that of a firm of solicitors. With a start he recognized the name. He had often heard his cousin speak of them—that scapegrace cousin who had been the primary cause of his misfortunes, in whose speculative plans he had once been led to believe.

So Philip Lazeby, who had disappeared from his life ten years before, had not forgotten that some reparation was due!

One hundred pounds! It was miraculous that such a sum should reach him in the very hour of his need. He laughed strangely.

His debts did not amount to half as much. Why, he could pay them all, and start again with a balance in hand! When Miss Milbourne came up to the counter that afternoon, he laid the papers before her with trembling hands.

"Look—look! I've had great luck. I'm saved! I—I thought I was ruined; but now, it's a hundred pounds, arrived just in time!"

The girl nodded.

"I'm so glad!"

He recovered himself in a moment.

"But, of course, it can't interest you. You've been so kind, you see. I—I forgot my place for the minute." He drew himself up.

"And I've asked to be your friend!" she said reproachfully.

"Why, I've known you for two years now—since before your son went away."

She saw his face change.

"I suppose you think of him often, how he's getting on, and all that?"

"I try not to." The words came jerkily.

"Oh! But why?"

"I don't want him! He's never written. I might be starving. He doesn't care! I—I don't want him back again!"

There was a moment's silence. The girl was about to speak, when, suddenly, he broke down.

"Yes, Heaven forgive me, I do!"

"He might come any day," said Miss Milbourne softly. John Chislett waved his hand in a tired fashion.

"No—no, you don't understand!"

He broke off. She had picked up the cheque.

"Let's talk about that instead."

Women and Americans.

Such an exhibition might bring in a few hundred pounds for charity: but the pointed emphasis it would lay on contrasting social conditions might bring more loss than gain. It might also act as an overstimulus to the criminal classes. More and more frequent are accounts of jewel robberies on English trains and at English country houses. If the professionals should have several days or weeks in which to study at short range the gawds of the governing classes robberies of this character would scarcely tend to diminish. On the other hand, the average Briton dearly loves a lord and would doubtless be willing to pay well for a sight of his lady's ceremonial headgear. And we should not expect the Americans on the spot to be far behind either as regards curiosity or jewels.

QUEEN MARY'S TASTE.

No Dutch Necks and no Big Hats for Her Maids of Honor.

Queen Mary is very particular in regard to the gowning of those in her immediate entourage, neatness and quiet good taste being the requirement among her ladies in waiting and the youthful maids of honor.

Among other regulations issued as royal commands to the latter young ladies were certain minute details, says the Gentlewoman, more especially as regards their morning and afternoon attire when in waiting upon her Majesty.

Queen Mary has a dislike, for instance, to the blouse or costume being cut low in the neck, and she permits only the neat high collar or lace for morning or afternoon toilets.

The Queen too has commanded that when in waiting her maids shall eschew another mode somewhat in favor with many young girls at the moment, the wearing of short elbow sleeves.

In some recent photographs published of one or other of the Queen's maids of honor, those with their morning gowns, the sleeves appear finishing closely up to the wrist. The Queen has also signified her liking for the neat small toque in preference to the wide brimmed fashionable hat with its towering plumes.

A NASTY ONE.

"Now, sir," began the smart K. C., "you say you discharged the plaintiff from your service because he was somewhat addicted to liquor. Is that correct?"

"It is," answered the defendant.

"Good!" said the G. C. "You do not consider it advantageous to yourself that your employees should be devotees of Bacchus?"

"That is so."

"Now, kindly tell the gentlemen of the jury—do you drink yourself?"

"That is my business!" retorted the defendant angrily.

"Quite so!" assented the K. C. suavely. "And have you any other business?"

How much money have you wasted in trying to get something for nothing?

facing round, looked up slowly towards the lettering above the window.

"Chislett & Son!" he muttered. There was a trace of bitterness in his voice.

Dusk had fallen, and it was almost time to turn down the lights. Then he would retire to the back room, and prepare his evening meal. Afterwards he would go to bed. Every day was much the same now, and he had almost given up hope of any change. His life was nearly over, he told himself. He must just keep on till the end—alone.

"Chislett & Son!" he breathed again. And this time he spoke shakily. His neighbor, the stout, jovial draper, called to see him twice before he roused himself.

"Good evening, I said!"

"I—I beg your pardon?" John Chislett stammered. "How are you, Mr. Dyson?"

"Going to shut up? I am. Nobody about to-night—eh? Trade's going to the dogs!"

The grey-haired man replied mechanically. It was easy to see that his thoughts were far away. Mr. Dyson followed the direction of his gaze, and nodded slowly.

"How's your boy getting on?" He jerked his thumb upwards. "That put me in mind of him. America suit him all right? I suppose you get a line pretty often?"

John Chislett's head was turned aside.

"I should have been very disappointed if he hadn't done well."

His pale features flushed as he realized his pitiful evasion. Yet it was obviously impossible to admit to a mere acquaintance that his son had never written at all, that they had parted almost as strangers.

"I expect so, too, after the education you gave him. Didn't you think he might stay on in the business? Or, perhaps, it wasn't good enough for him—eh? Most likely his ideas were cut above shop-keeping."

"It wasn't exactly that," answered the grey-haired man jerkily. "I—I wished him to go. Work here with me? Oh, that would have been rather too much to expect, wouldn't it?" He laughed queerly. "It's the advertising profession he's taken up."

"H'm! A new line for a man, that. Quite up to date. More suitable for him, too. You haven't been in trade all your life. I can see that. Family had some misfortunes, I expect? No—no, don't take offence! And I'm not asking any questions."

"The Chisletts had always been independent up to now."

"I guessed as much." The stout draper nudged his companion suddenly. "Hallo, here's a customer for you!"

John Chislett swung round. A girl was walking towards them.

"I know she's for you, and not me, because I've seen her often, going into your place. Very affable young lady. Looks in pretty nearly every week, doesn't she?"

The grey-haired man had stepped forward quickly. The girl smiled pleasantly, as he stood aside for her to enter the doorway.

When they reappeared at last, she bade him good-night cheerfully. Mr. Dyson looked out again, eyeing the departing figure with approval.

"Who is she? Live about here?"

"I don't know," returned John Chislett abstractedly. Her name's Milbourne."

fish—unjust!"

At the last moment, when his son's decision was obviously made, in desperation he had assumed anger, and spoken harsh words.

"But I wanted to keep him somehow! I didn't want to be left alone. I was in the wrong. I drove him out in the end. And, now—now, in all this time I haven't heard from him!"

John Chislett's grey head bent forward, and he brushed a hand across his eyes.

"Were you thinking your place needs doing up? I'd make it last till the spring, if I were you."

Mr. Dyson failed to notice his neighbor's flush.

"It's the name," explained John Chislett indistinctly. "And Son," you know. Harry, my boy, he—he's left the firm for good. I'll have that part painted out one of these days. It isn't necessary any more."

He gave instructions that afternoon, and next morning a man arrived. They stood on the pavement together.

"And what style o' letterin' would you like, sir?"

"Oh, leave the 'John Chislett,' please!"

"Just paint the rest out—eh?"

"Yes," agreed the grey-haired man, with an effort.

But, while the ladders were being fixed, he clenched his hands together indecisively.

"I can't do it!" he faltered, at last, and hurried out again. "I—I've changed my mind. I'll leave it as it is. Tell them, when you go back, that I—I'll pay for your time."

The workman stared.

"You don't want it done at all, sir?"

"Not yet; not now!"

When the mystified painter had gone, he crept out again.

"It's the only thing I've got to remember him by," he told himself unsteadily.

Several months passed, and each week his position became more precarious. Each day fewer customers seemed to visit the shop. The takings grew less and less. In the evening John Chislett would count the meagre contents of his till, then glance across to the little pile of bills which increased in spite of his economies.

They were the accounts from wholesale firms, and, hitherto, he had managed to settle them at the appointed date. But gradually even his small savings vanished. Then he had to ask for more time.

"Trade is so bad," he wrote wearily. "I will pay you at the earliest possible moment."

Collectors called after a while. He humbled himself before them. One, a hustling young man of brusque manner and elegant attire, waved his hand scornfully round the small premises.

"System, that's what you want, Mr. Chislett. Up-to-datensness, enterprise, modern methods! Attract the people somehow!"

"Ah, if I were younger!" said John Chislett gently.

"Well, we can only give you another fortnight. I'll call on the thirtieth again."

The grey-haired man shivered. Miss Milbourne, entering a moment later, had to repeat her greeting.

"Certainly—certainly! I beg your pardon!"

"You're in trouble. It's money, isn't it? I'm so sorry! But you

Miss Milbourne softly. John Chislett waved his hand in a tired fashion.

"No—no, you don't understand!"

He broke off. She had picked up the cheque.

"Let's talk about that instead. I'll tell you if I may. It came from a cousin of mine—Philip Lazebly. He—well, in a way, he's owed me some money for some years now, and I never expected he'd remember. I've misjudged him. I must write—"

The girl interrupted steadily. "But—about your son. You'd be glad, then, wouldn't you, if he came back?"

John Chislett made a gesture of impatience.

"There's no chance of that. I've told you, Miss Milbourne, that he doesn't care!"

"You're wrong, though!" He

Useful Hints for the 1

THE BREED TO BUY.

Most men who now raise sheep and those who are about to make a start want a breed that will produce both good mutton and good wool—a rather difficult combination.

There are some breeds, however, that produce both, but like the dual cow they are not in favor with the men who believe that one must breed for milk and butter, or for beef, and not for all.

The following breeds of sheep are probably better fitted by Nature and improvement to produce wool and mutton:

The Shropshires are much thought of throughout the West. The ewes weigh from 125 to 180 pounds, are very early maturing, producing very excellent carcasses and shearing from seven to ten pounds per head.

The Hampshires are a large sheep, not quite so early maturing, but producing very large lambs at an early age. They shear approximately the same as Shropshires.

The Oxford are very similar to the Hampshires in size and character.

The Southdown is particularly a mutton breed, producing a fleece somewhat lighter than the breeds mentioned above, but, nevertheless, producing a good fleece and a most excellent carcass of mutton.

The Dorsets, when mature, weigh from 130 to 180 pounds, and are very prolific. They shear a fleece of medium weight, and yield a good carcass. They are particularly valuable because of their extreme prolificacy, producing frequently three times in two years.

The Rambouillettes and Delaine Merinos are fine wool sheep, and produce fleeces which will yield from ten to sixteen pounds per head. They also produce good carcasses of mutton; however, more emphasis has been placed upon the fleece in the case of these two breeds than in the breeds mentioned above. The greatest difference between the Rambouillette and the Delaine glanced up, with a quick breath. "He's been hearing about you all the time. He asked someone to tell him everything, and they—they promised."

John Chislett eyed her wonderingly.

"You can't mean—"

"Yes, I'm his 'special correspondent'—she spoke confusedly—and I let him know all the news."

"And I never guessed. Then, that's why—"

"That's why I've tried to make friends with you. He's been doing well out there, too; and, when he comes back"—the color flooded her face—"well, we're going to—to keep to the arrangements we made!"

"Harry—my boy!" cried John Chislett amazedly. "Harry—and you?"

She faced him swiftly.

"Why not? We loved each other before he went. He'd intended to tell you that night—the night you quarrelled. He just said he meant to go, and you wouldn't give him a real chance to speak."

"It's true—it's true!"

"So, then, in—in his foolish pride he wouldn't mention me. He wouldn't bring me to you, and let me explain—how he wanted to make money quickly, both for my sake and yours. And there wasn't much opportunity here—nothing to the opening he'd found in New York, Mr. Chislett."

The grey-haired man caught her hand.

"But he's coming back to England for good. His firm are starting a branch over here, and he's to manage it. He says too, that he'll soon make this business pay again."

She glanced round the little shop and nodded confidently. John Chislett gave a little cry.

"Then he knows? He sent this money? It wasn't my cousin, after all?"

"No, Harry sent it. He owes you far more, he says. You economized for his sake when he was at school. You stinted yourself."

"When will he arrive?" asked John Chislett thickly. "When will he arrive?"

"At the end of the week, we hope. May I cable that he's to come straight here, and stay?"

The grey-haired man swallowed a lump in his throat.

"If he will, my dear!"

"You're to remember, he writes, that he's still a partner in the firm."

John Chislett, nodding, walked unsteadily through the door, and out to the pavement. Once again he looked up at the lettering.

"Chislett & Son!" he whispered chokingly. "... & Son!"—London Answers.

CORONATION ROSES.

New Industries in Designs Have Been Started.

Hertfordshire, by reason of the suitability of its soil the greatest rose-growing county in all England, is preparing Coronation roses in thousands, not only in single blooms and trees, but even in grotesque forms to suit the taste of a considerable section of the public. There are some people who will not be content with Coronation roses merely as buttonhole flowers or table decorations. To satisfy this class, several large rose growers have started a new industry in rose designs, such as the crown and orb, crown and sceptre, Japanese um-

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON,
APRIL 20.

Lesson V.—God's pity for the heathen, Jonah 3. 1 to 4. 1. Golden Text, Matt. 23. 19.

Verse 2. Nineveh—A city with a great population and one of wonders of the ancient world. It was situated on the upper Tigris, capital of Assyria, noted for its temples, palaces of marble and gold, hanging gardens, libraries, broad walls, and elaborate water system. The city proper was about nine miles in circumference, but beyond its walls lay miles of common dwellings, making a great city some sixty miles around. It was to this greater Nineveh (an exceeding great city meaning, literally, "great from God's point of view"), a city whose diameter was a three days' journey (3), that Jonah was called a second time (1) to go.

4. Into the city a day's journey—The distance a man could go in a day, of course, varied. Probably through the crowded sections of a populous city, preaching as he went, Jonah would go no more than six or seven miles.

Nineveh shall be overthrown—This was the message which Jehovah had bidden him to proclaim the first time, and Jonah had refused, not so much because of fear as because of his presentiment that God wished him to be something more than the agent of Nineveh's destruction, to be, in fact, nothing less than the channel of the divine grace (Jonah 4. 2) to these heathen, whose wickedness (see Nahum) he believed called for a speedy doom. The actual overthrow of Nineveh took place in B. C. 606.

5. Believed God.—That is, they accepted the preaching of the prophet of God as direct from heaven, and believed their city was doomed. So they organized a public fast, reaching from the king to the lowest subject. Their putting on sackcloth was the outward sign of mourning and penitence. The custom probably grew out of the ancient habit of wearing merely a loin cloth, woven from goats' and camels' hair, for a daily covering of the body. From this it became the garb of religious ceremony. The reality of the repentance is further evidenced by the people's sitting in ashes (6).

7. The decree of the king—A national rather than an individual repentance is the only kind a writer of this period could conceive in such a case. The inclusion of the beasts is intended to give a heightened effect to the picture of a people prostrate in sorrowful supplication. This is in keeping with the temper of Orientals, to make every possible outward expression of their sorrow. They believed God would not overlook the sight of their sackcloth and ashes, and their cries and the cries of the neglected cattle. Perchance, when he saw these works (10), he would repent of his harsh purpose and so he did. But the change was not so much in God as it was in themselves. Just as he had suited his warnings to the moral state in which they were (compare Jer. 18. 8), so now he suits his actions to the moral state indicated by their sorrow for their evil.

Notes of Particular Interest to Women Folks

BREAKFAST DISHES.

Gems—One egg, one pint of sweet milk; a pinch of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, and enough flour to make a stiff batter. Drop small spoonfuls of the batter in hot lard and fry as you would doughnuts. Serve hot with syrup.

Fried Eggs and Apples.—Peel and core two large firm apples, then cut in slices about a quarter of an inch thick, sprinkle over them salt and pepper, melt two tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan, add the apples, fry them two minutes, turning on each side. Break six eggs over the apples. Season and fry for a minute. Then set in the oven for five minutes. Remove and serve on hot dish.

Mushroom and Bacon.—Pick the mushrooms carefully and stew for a few minutes in a little brown sauce or stock and one tablespoonful butter, have ready some rounds of hot buttered toast and crisply fried slices of bacon; on each slice of toast place a slice of bacon and on that a mushroom or if small two or three, sprinkle with finely chopped parsley and pour sauce around.

Corn Bread.—One pint cornmeal, one pint clabbered milk, two eggs, one level teaspoonful soda, carefully pulverized with knife before measuring, one tablespoonful hot bacon drippings or lard, pinch of salt. Have well greased pan and moderately hot oven. Put cornmeal into mixing bowl, add soda and stir thoroughly, beat eggs and add sour milk to them, stirring the milk and eggs together slightly; now pour the liquid into the meal and when well mixed stir in quickly the hot bacon drippings. Pour immediately into pan and bake twenty-five to thirty-five minutes, according to size of pan.

CAKE.

Apple Cake.—One-quarter pound butter, three-quarters cup sugar, two eggs, rind of one-half lemon, one and one-half cups flour, one teaspoon baking powder; apples and raisins, one cup, cook together; 10 cents worth of almonds; bake one-half hour. Process: Beat eggs and sugar, melt butter, warm the flour and sugar before mixing, have the apples warm, too; when all together, put half of dough in square tin (grease the tin), then put on the apples and raisins, then the other dough, and on top of that sprinkle the almonds; the trick about this cake is to have everything warm that you can, and put it quick together; this is not an expensive cake, but it is fit for a king.

Angel Food.—Angel food cake is the easiest cake made, as well as most perfect. Buy a large china wash bowl to mix cake in. Sift one common glassful of flour and one rounded teaspoon of cream of tartar together five times. Sift one and one-half glassfuls granulated sugar five times. Beat whites of fourteen eggs in bowl until all is white but not stiff. Now have

One and one-half cupfuls of milk, three-fourths cupfuls of sugar, four tablespoonfuls of butter, one small teaspoonful of salt, three eggs, three cupfuls of flour and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Mix powder thoroughly with the flour, add sugar, milk, yolk of eggs beaten lightly, butter melted, and lastly fold in white of eggs. Into molds put a layer of batter, then a layer of fruit until two-thirds full, having dough on top. If canned fruit is used, drain off juice and mix with sweetened whipped cream for sauce.

COOKIES.

Drop Cookies.—Three large cupfuls of granulated sugar, one heaping cupful of good homemade lard, one and one-half cupfuls of sour milk, three eggs, one level teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoon each of allspice and cloves, one-half grated nutmeg, two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one sifter of flour, one package of seeded raisins. Cream the sugar and lard, add the well beaten eggs, then the sour milk, but add the soda to milk first. Sift the spices and baking powder with the flour, then with the raisins add to the above, stir with a spoon if not quite stiff enough add more flour. Drop with a teaspoon and bake in a quick oven.

USEFUL HINTS.

To let vines climb up on wooden walls will seriously damage them, as it promotes decay.

Hardly any better dusting cloth can be found than the old-fashioned red bandanna handkerchief.

When peeling apples, pour boiling water over them, and the process will be more easily carried out.

When making sweet croquettes, add a little sugar to the crumbs in which the croquettes are to be rolled.

Sewing machine needles may be used much longer if when the points begin to get dull they are rubbed on a piece of emery board.

After almonds are blanched and buttered they may easily be browned by shaking them over a fire in a corn-popper.

Oil from the canned sardines may be used in frying potato cakes.

Hot cakes or bread will cut easily if the knife is made hot.

After washing a lamp chimney, polish with dry salt to make the glass brilliant and prevent it from cracking.

A few pieces of gum camphor kept in the boxes in which silver is packed in wrappings will prevent its turning dark.

Salt thrown into the oven immediately after something has been burned in it will make the objectionable odor less noticeable.

Cotton gloves to wear in doing housework are cooler and better in every way than old kid gloves.

To satisfy this class, several large rose growers have started a new industry in rose designs, such as the crown and orb, crown and sceptre, Japanese umbrellas, windmills, pergolas and pagodas, the Prince of Wales' feathers, field guns, shields, and even triumphant arches and ships in full sail. One single firm has planted 50,000 Coronation rose trees all aimed to bloom in June. "They are mostly of the famous type," said the manager of the nurseries the other day, "such as Dorothy Perkins, Lady Gay, Hiawatha, and other well-known varieties, and in view of the coming festivities, we have started to train roses in almost every conceivable shape."

For the Tiller of the Soil

Merino is in the greater size of the former.

The Cotswold, Lincoln and Lester are known as the long-wooled breeds, producing fleeces weighing from eight to twelve pounds, and producing good carcasses before the lambs reach the age of one year. These three breeds are comparatively large.

But breed is not everything in the selection of breeding rams and ewes. After one has made up his mind as to the breed he wants then he must know how to select the best individual of that breed.

There are some mighty poor specimens of the best breeds, and the trick is to know enough to let these alone.

THE EXPERIENCE OF MANY.

A man who has gone into the poultry business in the right way recently received a jolt that surprised him. He paid a good price for eggs guaranteed to be from hens that had scored 100 points, and when his first flock of birds were about a year old he had them scored by a local judge. He was delighted when several of his best pullets and cockerels scored 100 and the rest ran up above 95. He was sure he had champion prize-winners until he sent about a dozen of his best ones to poultry show. Then came the jolt.

His birds were judged by men who knew their business and play no favorites, and the result showed none of his stock to be better than 92, while more than half of the flock ran down below 85. Of course, his birds are pretty good at that, but not good enough to bring fancy prices, while the eggs will bring little, if anything, above store prices.

This man's experience is too often repeated. The whole trouble lies in amateurs expecting too much of their flock, unscrupulous fanciers misrepresenting their stock and local judges being incompetent or too anxious to please.

when he saw these works (10), he would repent of his harsh purpose. And so he did. But the change was not so much in God as it was in themselves. Just as he had suited his warnings to the moral state in which they were (compare Jer. 18. 8), so now he suits his actions to the moral state indicated by their sorrow for their evil.

Chapter 4, verse 1. It displeased Jonah—He was jealous. It did not set well with the Israelites that God should postpone the doom of the heathen while the world seemed to wait with groanings for justice. And that they should repent was particularly offensive to them.

2. Tarshish—So far as Israel was concerned, this represented the ends of the earth, for, it was a country in the extreme southwest corner of Spain. Taking ship to Tarshish was a kind of proverb for a long journey. By fleeing to this distant port, Jonah hoped to put forever behind his back the odious commission of God. The magnitude of his sin is measured by the fact that he knew God to be gracious, merciful, slow to anger, and, in spite of this knowledge, evaded the duty of making this known to the hated heathen. And now that he saw at length the unfolding of this abundant loving kindness of God, and his willingness to repent upon condition of the heathen's turning from their evil, he thought it hardly worth while to live (3).

4. Doest thou well to be angry?—Here he gives no answer, for he doubtless is silenced by the sting of the rebuke. But later, he concludes (9) that it is well for him to be exceeding angry, even unto death. He felt that it was right that his prophecy should be absolutely fulfilled, and he could not tolerate any divine forbearance with the foes of his people. In this he was a true type of Israel, for even after the exile they continued to chafe at the prosperity of the Gentiles. In their pride as the chosen of God they nourished a fear that others than themselves might be the objects of the infinite grace.

6. A gourd—Like Elijah, Jonah, thwarted in his purpose, withdrew to a solitary place where he could be alone with his distress. And there God came to him, as he did to Elijah, in compassion. The gourd was a fruit of a vine that grew very rapidly and spread its broad leaves as a protection from the sun, when planted by such booths as that of Jonah, or near the trellises of houses.

10-11. Thou hast had regard for the gourd—The meaning of this part of the story is clear enough: If Jonah's care for the poor gourd is so great as to excite his pity and even anger when it withers away, shall not God show pity to the thousands of people of Nineveh, especially the helpless little children (these that cannot discern between their right hand and their left), and the innocent cattle? So the closing impression of the book is one of a compassionate heavenly Father who has regard for all the works of his hands.

Lamp burners should be washed frequently to remove dust and carbon that choke the perforations. Occasionally they should be boiled in washing powder solution.

the easiest cake made, as well as most perfect. Buy a large china wash bowl to mix cake in. Sift one common glassful of flour and one rounded teaspoon of cream of tartar together five times. Sift one and one-half glassfuls granulated sugar five times. Beat whites of fourteen eggs in bowl until all is white, but not stiff. Now, have some one turn bowl always in same direction while you very gradually sift and beat the sugar in thoroughly. Carefully fold in the flour, a very little at a time; add flavoring. Beat constantly from time you begin to beat eggs until placed in oven. A nice flavoring is almond, or 3 old-fashioned sweet smelling geranium leaves, as preferred. Bake one hour. Oven must be quite cool at first, then gradually brought to a medium heat. Do not open oven door for twenty minutes. When done turn angel food pan upside down to cool one hour; loosen around edge and center with knife. Use white icing.

Almond Cake.—Seven eggs, one tablespoonful of cornstarch, one cup of sugar, one-half pound almonds, meats ground fine. Beat whites of eggs to stiff froth, add half of sugar, then beat yolks of eggs and add the remaining sugar and unite the two. Sift the ground almonds, adding a tablespoonful of cornstarch. Add this to the eggs and sugar and bake in a slow oven forty-five minutes. The sugar should be well sifted. This makes a good sized cake and is fine.

SALADS.

Salmon Salad.—One can salmon chopped fine, four hard boiled eggs, eight lettuce leaves; mix these with a salad dressing made of one-half teaspoonful salt, one-half teaspoonful ground mustard, pinch of pepper, one pound sugar, one pound butter, one pound flour, one egg yolk, one-third cup vinegar. Heat butter and blend dry ingredients. Then add egg yolk and vinegar. Cook in double boiler until it thickens. Serve salad on lettuce leaves.

Orange Jelly Salad.—The making of this salad requires little extra effort and has the added merit of keeping well if made in large quantity. Soak one tablespoonful of gelatin in one-third cup of water, add one-half pint of orange juice and let come to a boil. Prepare one-half cupful of nut meats. Peel two oranges, divide into sections and halve each section. When the jelly is ready to mold pour a little into the molds, then some nut meats and orange; continue until the molds are filled. When ready to serve turn out on a bed of crisp, small lettuce leaves and pour over a cream mayonnaise.

Fruit Salad.—One pound white grapes cut in half and seeds removed; cut fine four apples, one bunch of celery, one cup pineapple, two bananas, and mix all together with following dressing: Rub together dry two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one teaspoonful of mustard, add two eggs well beaten, one-half cup vinegar, piece of butter size of a walnut, and a pinch of salt. Cook in double boiler until thick. To serve, cut lettuce into shreds with scissors and place on plates in form of nests and put a helping of salad in center and sprinkle chopped walnut meats over top. This makes enough for twelve persons.

Parents See Their Own Children in All Children.

In describing Uap, one of the Caroline Islands, Dr. W. H. Furness says that children become more or less public property on that island as soon as they are able to run about from house to house.

They cannot without extraordinary exertion fall off the island, and like little guinea-pigs, they can find food anywhere; their clothing grows by every roadside, and any shelter, or no shelter, is good enough for the night.

They cannot starve; there are no wild beasts or snakes to harm them; what matters it if they sleep under the eigh, star-powdered ceiling of their foster-mother's nursery, or curled up on mats beneath their father's thatch?

There is no implication here that parents are not fond of their children; on the contrary, they love them so much that they see their own children in all children. It is the ease of life and its surroundings which have atrophied the emotion of parental love.

When a father has merely to say to his wife and children, "Go out and shake your breakfast off the trees," or "Go to the thicket and gather your clothes," to him the struggle for existence is meaningless, and without a struggle the prizes of life are held in light esteem.

Somebody's children are always about the houses, and to the fore in all excitements, and never did I see them roughly handled or harshly treated.

EUROPE'S ARTIFICIAL WOOD.

The manufacture of artificial woods from sawdust for mouldings and finishing and building materials has become rather extensive in Germany and France. For this purpose blood and solutions of glue, starch, flour and aluminate sulphate are the common agglutinants. These artificial woods take on a high polish and look attractive. Another artificial wood, known as xyloolith, is understood to be composed of sawdust and chloride of magnesium. It is said to possess the qualities of both wood and slate, and, as such, is suitable for wainscoting, carved work, stairs, floors and sills.

From every point on earth we are equally near to heaven and to the infinite.

The Rosary.

Can an evil mind, breeding evil thoughts, exert an adverse influence upon an entire family, bring that family to ruin and the members of the household remain in ignorance of the reason for the unhappiness? That is the question that "The Rosary," a beautiful new play from the pen of Edward E. Rose and produced by Messrs. Rowland and Clifford at the Brisco Opera House, next Wednesday evening, May 3rd, answers in the affirmative.

Monday evening about 8:30 o'clock the firemen had a call to the home of Mrs. Cronk, corner of Centre and Thomas streets, where the curtains of one of the parlor windows had caught fire. Very little damage was done and the blaze was extinguished before the firemen arrived.

Councillor Waller is the father of a motion passed in the Council on Thursday evening last requesting the Fire, Water and Light Committee to furnish the council with estimates of the cost of a suction pipe to be placed on the swing bridge so that the fire engine could be placed near the south end of the bridge in case of fire in South Napanee or near the docks. At present there is not a dock near the bridge which would safely carry the fire engine without risk, and in placing it on a dock or near the river bank there is always the danger of running it into the river. The engine could also be placed near the bridge in half the time it would take to place it on a dock. In winter time the pipe would have to be lifted from the water and a hole kept open beside one of the piers ready to drop it into in case of fire. Mr. Waller's idea is a good one and can probably be carried out without much expense.

PAUL'S for PURE PREPARED AINTS.

Committed Suicide

On Sunday morning, about 9 o'clock, Mr. Dennis Lake was discovered hanging in a corner of his barn. Mr. Lake had driven his wife to the Paisley House about seven o'clock, went home again and had a hearty breakfast and then went out to see to his horses. Not returning at the usual time his daughter, Mrs. Huffman, went to look for him and discovered that he had committed suicide. Deceased had fastened a blanket across a corner and fastened the door with a rope before committing the rash act. Neighbors were at once called and the man was cut down, the body being still warm. Coroner Dr. Cowan was summoned and decided that an inquest was unnecessary. The remains were taken to Belleville on Tuesday for interment. About three years ago deceased attempted suicide by poisoning but was discovered in time and recovered. No reason can be assigned for his rash act, though he had been acting rather queerly for a few days past. Mr. Lake was a noted horseman and kept a couple of fast horses and was a familiar figure at all race meets in this district.

Sudden Death.

The citizens of Napanee received a shock on Saturday morning when it became known that Mr. W. K. Pruyn had passed away very suddenly. Mr. Pruyn was in his usual health and excellent spirits on Friday evening and attended the Ladies Musicals with Mrs. Pruyn and his daughter. Afterwards Mr. and Mrs. Pruyn entertained a few friends for a couple of hours. Early in the morning he complained of a pain in his side and his wife arose and procured him a drink of water, after which he apparently went to sleep again, but about an hour later Mrs. Pruyn found he had passed away. Deceased was about fifty-five years of age and had been a resident of Napanee all his life. Among the business men of the town deceased was much respected and well liked and among a host of friends his cheery smile and good fellowship will be sadly missed. The funeral took place from his late residence on Monday afternoon. Services were held in St. Mary Magdalene's church and the interment in the family plot at Riverside cemetery. Nearly all the business men of Napanee were in the funeral procession besides the Oddfellow's lodges, to pay their last respects to a departed friend and brother. An unusually large number of floral offerings were placed on his casket. Besides his wife two children, Miss Alice, at home and Dr. W. G. Pruyn, of Mexico City, Mexico, remain.

The old way was mustard or bella-donna plasters. The new way is Merrill's Wizard Lightning. Cures all pain, aches or bruises in five minutes. Price 25c.

The Oat-Fed Man Can Outwork All the Rest

A concern which employs 2,000 woodcutters made scientific tests of food. The result has been to prove oatmeal the great endurance food. Those workers now all start the day on a diet of oats alone.

No other grain supplies the energy of oats. You know the affect on horses. It is just the same on man. Any man can increase his endurance, his vim and vitality by eating more oats.

That is why oatmeal is so immensely important. In this food above all foods one should insist on the utmost. It is not a wise thing to serve common oatmeal.

The rich, plump grains used in Quaker Oats are selected by 62 siftings. Only ten pounds can be obtained from a bushel. But those choice grains have richness and flavor, and the maximum value as food.

Quaker Oats is the cream of the oats made delicious. Yet, despite its quality, the cost to you is but one-half cent per dish. Made in Canada. (170)

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

The Rosary.

A modern play to be produced at the Brisco Opera House, Wednesday evening, May 3rd, is called "The Rosary," written by Edward E. Rose and produced by the well known theatrical managers, Messrs. Howland and Clifford. Quietly and modestly, with no blaze of trumpets, it projects a quiet word into our turmoil of opinions, which many believe will revolutionize our ethics of marriage and divorce; as an illustration "The Rosary" takes you into the heart of an American home, such as our homes are to-day. It shows peace and happiness, then suddenly a canker sore is unmasked—lack of faith in the husband. Slowly, little by little, is seen the devastating power of atheism, how it saps the strength and breaks the will so that when doubt and suspicion creep in they find fertile soil for their descendants—hatred and revenge. Then comes the spiritual power of a great man—a priest whose life is given to mankind. Slowly he analyzes the situation and leads the husband and wife whom he loves, out of the darkness to happiness and peace. "The Rosary" comes direct from its successful run at the Globe Theatre, Boston.

Scene from "THE ROSARY"

Brisco Opera House, Wednesday Evening, May 3rd.

Peep again in your oven.
See those loaves, those pleasing loaves you've made.
How fat—rounded—substantial.
No, they wont fall when colder.
Because the Manitoba strength that is in FIVE ROSES will hold them up till eaten.
This sturdy elastic gluten has kept them from dropping flat in the oven.
No unsightly holes 'twixt crust and crumb—
never.
All risen evenly—to stay risen.
Never heavy—sodden—soggy—indigestible.
Yours are the FIVE ROSES loaves—
Crinkly and appetizing of crust.
Golden brown and tender.
Snowy of crumb—light as thistledown.
FIVE ROSES helps a lot.
Try it soon.
